EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Introduction

The Cultural Collaborative (TCC) is a plan for San Antonio's creative economy—the economic expression of the creative, or arts and cultural, community. This plan is innovative in planning for the entire spectrum of San Antonio's creative community: its nonprofit arts and cultural organizations, its creative businesses, and its creative individuals. As TCC research documents, more than nine of ten San Antonians, of all backgrounds, participate in arts and cultural activities, and they naturally weave them throughout their personal and work lives. TCC is among the first plans of its type to recognize and support this integration. The plan encompasses not only the recognized arts institutions but also the equally vibrant undercurrent of cultural activity flowing throughout the community—nonprofit and commercial, professional and community-based, institutional and individual.

"We need to foster the spirit and practice of enterprise in San Antonio."

Executive Committee member

What is the "Creative Community"?

The "creative community" includes the full range of the arts and culture: fine arts as well as popular, ethnic, commercial and design arts. It also includes cultural events, such as festivals and celebrations, concerts and dances in the parks, and the preservation of history and heritage within its purview. The "creative community" or "creative economy" It includes-encompasses all individuals, businesses and nonprofit organizations that directly or indirectly produce cultural products or services. Also, thinkers and doers trained, whether formally or informally, in specific cultural and artistic skills. ~~The focus on professional creativity in a cultural field is the defining characteristic of the work of the creative community.~~

Creative individuals include visual artists, performing artists, ~~designers~~, media artists, film makers, arts educators, craftspeople, ~~designers~~, architects, writers, production technicians, and others.

Creative business include advertising, marketing, architecture, design, digital media, music and dance clubs, art galleries, art-related retail stores, film production and post-production, art-related printing, live theatres, festivals, and others.

Creative nonprofits include all types of arts and cultural organizations, historical and heritage

Planning meetings brought about many hours of discussion and lively exchange of ideas resulting in the development of a vision, goal and set of objectives that describes the type of community that participants would like to strive towards and direct The Cultural Collaborative implementation.

Vision: Because the creative expressions, both traditional and contemporary, of our diverse cultures and communities nourish us all, the people of San Antonio are committed to the expansion of resources, leadership, and infrastructure to support a healthy creative economy that benefits residents and visitors alike.

Goal: To support the growth and recognition of San Antonio's creative economy.

Objectives: There are five objectives in support of the goal of TCC and the strategies of the plan are organized according to these five areas. Note that many of the strategies support more than one objective, and are cross-referenced at the end of each section in the body of the plan.

- Access: Provide greater access to the arts and culture to residents throughout San Antonio.
- Economic Development: Promote the economic growth of San Antonio's creative sector.
- Community Awareness: Increase community awareness of the role and value of all San Antonio's arts and culture.
- Authenticity and Creativity: Strengthen San Antonio's unique and diverse culture, heritage and architecture.
- Resources: Develop increased resources of all types.

Ensuring cultural equity is a fundamental value of The Cultural Collaborative, applying to all five of its objectives. Cultural equity is defined as an ongoing goal that includes the shared value of mutual respect for diverse cultures and the fair distribution of resources among cultural communities.

Cultural Planning Context in San Antonio

San Antonio has a relatively diverse, young and poor population. These demographics suggest a focus on arts and cultural programs that reflect a multicultural population; free and low-cost programs; and arts education beginning at an early age. In comparison with other major American cities, San Antonio's arts and cultural community is generally smaller and under-resourced, with a relatively high reliance on public dollars. This comparison, along with previous plans and studies, suggest that TCC focus on development of a new, dedicated revenue stream for the arts and culture; deferred maintenance of cultural facilities; and shared marketing. San Antonio's political realities suggest that implementation of TCC will require a dedicated and sustained advocacy effort.

"While it will come as no surprise that cultural groups have limited resources with which to accomplish their missions, the current situation is particularly grave."

Wolf/Keens Preplanning Study

Strategies: Access

San Antonio is a city that values and participates in the arts and culture. According to the TCC public opinion survey (page 77), 93% of all residents participate in at least one cultural activity each year, 70% attend a church or neighborhood festival and 61% visit a museum or art gallery. Parents seek out cultural activities for their children—54% of households with children have a child participating in the arts outside of school. Nonetheless, increasing access to the arts and culture for all of San Antonio was a fundamental goal articulated by the community throughout the TCC planning process.

The objective of providing greater access to arts and cultural programs to residents throughout San Antonio encompasses the following strategies:

- Bringing the arts and culture to the neighborhoods by facilitating increased use of existing venues and programs throughout all geographic areas of the city.
- Making the arts and culture relevant to diverse cultures by focusing on the needs and interests of target populations and addressing other barriers to access, such as cost, transportation, time and information about available programs.
- Expanding arts and cultural education by addressing education on the policy level, and making existing arts and cultural resources more available to schools.
- Improving communitywide marketing to residents.

Strategies: Economic Development

TCC is founded in part on the observation that San Antonio's creative economy is an important, yet under-recognized economic sector, and that the community as a whole will benefit from development of the sector. This is corroborated by the preliminary results of an economic impact study of San Antonio's creative sector conducted by Drs. Richard Butler and Mary Stefl, of Trinity University, which show a total annual output of at least $1.1 billion and total employment of approximately 11,000 jobs. This means that San Antonio's creative sector has an economic impact comparable to other local industries currently targeted for economic development.

"I am reluctant to promote cheap real estate and labor as a competitive advantage; many communities offer this. Our real advantage is the sense of community, history and tradition."

SATAI Executive

Economic development of San Antonio's creative sector includes the following strategies:

- Strategic planning for the creative sector.
- Small business development adapted to meet the particular needs of creative enterprises, including a business incubator and business training.
- Workforce development, including creative training at all educational levels and professional development.
- Supporting creative individuals through technical assistance and artists fellowships.
- Developing or enhancing cultural districts throughout the city in areas such as the Houston Street area, South Flores, South Town, Guadalupe Street, the "People are the source of the creative edge that technology and other industries require."

*Dr. Richard Florida,
Finding Ways Conference
Keynote Speaker*

Deco District, Nagolitos Street, Blanco Street, South Presa Street, and the Carver Cultural Center District.

- Expanding cultural and heritage tourism by creating a specific plan and program at the CVB.

Strategies: Community Awareness

Increasing community awareness of the arts and culture was a consistent, clear message from the community throughout the TCC process.

Participants commented on the extraordinary accomplishments and value of San Antonio's arts and cultural community, and their frustration that this contribution is not better understood or supported by the public and by policy makers. This gap is a national phenomenon, not merely a San Antonio issue, which has prompted the creation of a national advocacy organization and a call for local advocacy programs.

"...young African Americans are not learning about their culture, just gangster rap—not blues, jazz, gospel or other art forms, and not about the accomplishments of San Antonio's own major Black artists."

Community Press meeting participant

Strategies for increasing community awareness include:

- Increasing public understanding of the role and value of San Antonio's creative community through an independent, long term advocacy initiative.
- Ensuring cultural equity through adoption of a cultural equity policy.
- Increasing outreach to the community through technical assistance and targeted funding.

Strategies: Authenticity and Creativity

"No longer the sleepy little village of Western-movie fame or the military town that once boasted five bases, San Antonio is now known as a tourist destination. It is also a hot spot of contemporary art...."

Art in America, January 2002

TCC planning participants view San Antonio as engaged in a long-term struggle to define its authentic identity and choose how it embraces creativity. They place great value on aspects of San Antonio's way of life and view culture and creativity as essential ingredients. They also object to the erosion of San Antonio's authentic identity and consider culture and creativity to be critical to improving it. At the same time, they expressed great pride and enjoyment in what they perceive as San Antonio's authentic identity. Their experience of this authenticity is largely a cultural one, intimately linked to creativity, as well as heritage and tradition.

Strengthening San Antonio's unique and diverse culture, heritage and architecture involves the following strategies:

- Improving urban design through development of an urban design master plan that addresses civic aesthetics in new public and private development and promotes the successful integration of contemporary architecture into the cityscape.
- Improving the Public Art and Design Enhancement Program by developing a public art master plan that addresses issues such as vision, maintenance and structure.

Strategies: Resources(Page 65)

San Antonio needs and supports increased resources for the arts and culture. Its creative community is now, and has been historically, under-funded and under-resourced. Increasing resources of all types was identified by planning participants as an objective, to “raise the bar” of support and reshape the ecology of resources for the creative community. Moreover, according to the TCC public opinion survey, San Antonians are willing to pay higher taxes for the arts and culture. Two out of three respondents (66%) indicated strong support for an initiative to generate tax revenue for arts support if it meant they would spend an additional $5 per year in taxes; 58% strongly support an additional $10. Moreover, at the levels of $10 and $5 in additional taxes per year, respondents who strongly favor an initiative outnumber those strongly against it by 3 to 1.

Increasing resources involves the following strategies:

- Generating new leadership by developing a temporary new arts and culture organization, The Cultural Collaborative (TCC), to oversee implementation of the plan and take the lead on advocacy.
- Increasing public funding by increasing the share of the “Hotel Tax” allocated to arts and culture, and developing a new, dedicated tax-based revenue stream through a joint tax initiative in collaboration with other community organizations
- Increasing private funding by convening funders around issues of communitywide importance, and supporting the development of the Bexar County Arts and Cultural Fund.
- Addressing cultural facilities’ needs by developing new capital funding programs and investigating the potential of adapting a cultural facility for a shared-use performing arts center.

Implementation(Page 73)

TCC is a ten-year plan and it is likely that fulfilling some objectives will require the entire time period. However, it is anticipated that work can begin on each of the recommended strategies, in a priority order, during the first four years of the plan.

INTRODUCTION

Overview

The Cultural Collaborative (TCC) is a plan for San Antonio's creative economy. The creative economy is the economic expression of the creative, or arts and cultural community. The Cultural Collaborative is innovative in planning for the entire spectrum of San Antonio's creative community—its nonprofit arts and cultural organizations, its creative businesses, and its creative individuals (see page 13). TCC research finds that more than nine of ten San Antonians of all backgrounds participate in arts and cultural activities, and they naturally weave them throughout their personal and work lives. The Cultural Collaborative is among the first national plans to recognize and support this integration. The TCC encompasses recognized arts institutions as well as the equally vibrant undercurrent of cultural activity flowing throughout the community—nonprofit and commercial, professional and community-based, institutional and individual.

The Cultural Collaborative is also San Antonio's vision for its cultural future. It was developed through more than a year of intensive community participation and planning. An 85-member Steering Committee of community leaders, representing the creative community and other sectors of San Antonio, oversaw and participated in the planning process. Beginning with the November 2003 conference, Finding Ways: A Conference of Art, Culture and Economic Development, more than 1,000 individuals and organizations participated directly, providing their insight and suggestions in interviews, focus groups and community forums. Wider input was gathered from a community-wide opinion survey and an economic impact study. To gain additional perspectives, the planning team also compared San Antonio to other cities and examined models from other communities. Collectively, the process yielded consistent, clear messages about the type of creative community San Antonians desire and the ways they want to achieve their vision.

"We must get away from thinking of San Antonio as a small town. We need loftier visions."

Digital Media Cluster meeting participant

TCC aims to achieve groundbreaking and far-reaching results for San Antonio. It will grow the creative sector of the economy, generating desirable new jobs and businesses. It will support thriving cultural districts and activities both downtown and in the neighborhoods. It will promote arts education in schools and expand cultural opportunities for young people throughout the City. And it will reinforce the authentic way of life, both traditional and contemporary, that San Antonio prizes so highly.

The Cultural Collaborative is a living document and its implementation a dynamic process. The pace of change in the world is not only faster but also less predictable. The plan is designed with a flexible framework that, as its name implies, activates a broad array of partnerships among nonprofits, businesses, government and community leadership. It also anticipates that these people and organizations will creatively adapt the strategies of the plan to the changed circumstances they will certainly encounter.

Vision, Goal and Objectives

Planning meetings brought about many hours of discussion and lively exchange of ideas resulting in the development of a vision, goal and set of objectives that describes the type of community that participants would like to strive towards and direct The Cultural Collaborative implementation.

The vision:

Because the creative expressions, both traditional and contemporary, of our diverse cultures and communities nourish us all, the people of San Antonio are committed to the expansion of resources, leadership, and infrastructure to support a healthy creative economy that benefits residents and visitors alike.

The goal:

To support the growth and recognition of San Antonio's creative economy.

This goal emphasizes the importance of San Antonio's creative economy and the creative community that comprises it—its nonprofit arts and cultural organizations, its creative businesses, and its creative individuals. The creative community is a major, yet under-recognized sector that is special and valued by San Antonians and attractive to visitors. It also has great potential to contribute further to the community if recognized as a critical industry.

The planning process identified ten focus areas for consideration:

Advocacy and outreach	Creative individuals	Resources
Arts and cultural infrastructure	Cultural and heritage tourism	Vital neighborhoods
Arts and culture in education	Cultural equity
Civic aesthetics and public art	Economic development

Investigation of these issues resulted in the development of five primary objectives in support of the plan's goal:

Access: To provide greater access to the arts and culture to residents throughout San Antonio.

Economic Development: To promote the economic growth of San Antonio's creative sector.

Community Awareness: To increase community awareness of the role and value of all San Antonio's arts and culture.

Authenticity and Creativity: To strengthen San Antonio's unique and diverse culture, heritage and architecture.

Resources: To develop increased resources of all types.

Note that in addition to the overall vision for TCC, the Executive Committee developed detailed vision statements for ten focus areas in the planning process (see page 77).

Cultural Equity

Throughout the planning process, cultural equity was a constant topic of interest of the TCC Executive Committee and other planning participants, making it clear it should be addressed throughout the plan. Cultural equity was defined as an ongoing goal that includes the shared value of mutual respect for diverse cultures and the fair distribution of resources among cultural communities. Ensuring cultural equity is a fundamental value of The Cultural Collaborative, applying to all five of its objectives. Accordingly, one of the TCC strategies is to develop and adopt a cultural equity policy for both TCC and the City of San Antonio (page 56) to serve as a guiding principle for TCC-related initiatives. Cultural equity is also discussed specifically in the Access section (page 30).

"The schools focus on European art; we need more attention to Chicano art and culture."

Youth Focus Group participant

The TCC Executive Committee had two focused discussions on cultural equity and developed several foundational ideas that were later infused in a vision statement to help guide future policies. The statement can be read along with the other vision statements for the TCC focus areas on page 77. Pablo Martinez, writer and member of the TCC planning team, prepared the following statement, which eloquently describes San Antonio's aspirations for cultural equity.

To begin working toward the goal of cultural equity, present-day realities, as well as historical facts, must be carefully considered. Cultural equity, then, is something to which San Antonio aspires—it cannot be a blithely made assumption.

Just as certain forms of equity between individuals are founded on an abiding belief in the dignity and worth of every individual, so too must equity between and among groups of individuals whose work addresses cultural expressions recognize, value, respect, and support diverse expressions with fairness, sensitivity, and understanding.

Cultural equity also implies a fair distribution of resources, not only to artists and arts organizations (i.e., the not-for-profit sector of a creative economy), but also to the communities they serve and in which they reside. This aspect of cultural equity helps insure that what is fair and right is compellingly evinced in equal access and widespread cultural participation.

Given the constantly evolving nature of culture (here broadly defined), it follows that cultural equity must be constantly championed and protected, the same as any other basic right, tenet, or resource.

Through a vigorous affirmation of cultural equity, San Antonio would boldly demonstrate a keen, fair, and forward-looking vision for cultural expressions, their sources, and their support systems, the critical bedrock of all creative environments.

The Creative Community

The Cultural Collaborative adopts an expansive, inclusive definition of San Antonio's creative community, but not one that is unlimited. TCC includes all individuals, businesses and nonprofit organizations in San Antonio that directly or indirectly produce cultural products or services. Also, thinkers and doers trained, whether formally or informally, in specific cultural and artistic skills.

"Talented people are drawn to or stay in communities with visible signs of diversity. Diversity is the breeding ground of creativity and the source of economic growth."

*Dr. Richard Florida,
Finding Ways Conference Keynote Speaker*

Following generally accepted definitions in the field, TCC equates the creative community with a broad view of “the arts and culture.” This includes fine arts as well as popular, ethnic, commercial and design arts. TCC also includes cultural events, such as festivals and celebrations, concerts and dances in the parks, and the preservation of history and heritage within its purview. Another key aspect of San Antonio’s creative community is the “undercurrent” of cultural activity and people that has generally gone unrecognized. Outside of San Antonio’s nonprofit cultural institutions, “creatives” run clubs that are major music venues, produce poetry slams and independent films, and promote individual artists of all disciplines. These people and activities have previously “flown below the radar”—TCC specifically includes their interests within its strategies. Nonetheless, it is clear that TCC is not a plan for all cultural forms, such as religion, science or the environment, but recognizes that art and creativity inherently inform these areas in a profound way.

The TCC Executive Committee discussed its understanding of arts and culture to help focus the planning process for the community of San Antonio. The committee detailed the breadth and subtleties of San Antonio’s arts and culture, which is largely informed by the contemporary ramifications of its Mexican/Mexican American heritage and extensive cultural diversity. San Antonio’s arts and cultural leaders embrace a broad and relativistic notion of the arts, rejecting past perceptions of valuing some art forms more than others. Rather, they value what is essentially “artistic” about all art forms. They also include many aspects of culture within their definition, including “shared expressions,” “expressions of tradition,” “way of life,” and “invention.” For example, TCC planning included a focus group on hip hop culture, whose participants eloquently described the history and scope of hip hop, and its importance to the creativity of many young people in San Antonio.

“Arts” has traditionally meant the fine arts: visual arts, music, literature, theater and dance. Choreographer Liz Lerman, winner of the 2002 MacArthur “Genius” Award, describes the shift to a contemporary definition as a vertical hierarchy becoming a level playing field. Using the dance field as an example, ballet used to be on the top of a pyramid, with folk dance and hip-hop on the bottom. Now we see all art forms on the same level, having similar value but different focuses. Similarly, we now include in our definition of “arts” such art forms as crafts, ethnic, traditional, popular and electronic or digital arts.

“Culture” is most often defined in anthropological terms. A standard textbook definition is:

The system of shared beliefs, values, customs, behaviours, and artifacts that the members of society use to cope with their world and with one another, and that are transmitted from generation to generation through learning. (Bates and Plog, "Cultural Anthropology," McGraw Hill, 1990)

This is a very broad definition, one that extends far beyond the boundaries of even an expansive definition of the arts. The field of the arts and culture draws an indistinct circle around its central territory of the arts, and acknowledges other cultural expressions on a case-by-case basis. Community context is one useful key to determining what is a part of "the arts and culture." As one TCC planning participant noted, Charlotte, North Carolina, is the regional home of stock car racing and the NASCAR circuit. Charlotte views this racing as a cultural form and offers tours and events celebrating the races, racing history, and the community's "racing culture." The San Antonio equivalent might be the Lowrider Festival, the San Antonio Stock Show & Rodeo and Charreadas.

In any event, San Antonio is clearly a community with a rich history and heritage, including a large and well-preserved collection of historical buildings and places, such as its historic theaters and five eighteenth-century missions. Planning participants agreed that this heritage and built environment is special, even unique to San Antonio, which even more so places the cultural territory of heritage and historic preservation within the purview of The Cultural Collaborative.

CULTURAL PLANNING CONTEXT IN SAN ANTONIO

The Demographic Context

San Antonio Has a Large and Unusually Diverse Population

With a population of 1,144,646 in 2000, San Antonio is the 8th largest city in the nation, according to the U.S. Census. Moreover, the city is growing rapidly, having increased in population by nearly 18% between 1990 and 2000. San Antonio is also one of the most diverse cities in America, with 53% Hispanic or Latino, 36% White, not Hispanic, 7% African-American and 2% Asian or Pacific Islander. Eleven percent of the population is foreign-born.

Implication for cultural planning: With a diverse multicultural citizenry, San Antonio needs a diverse cultural services delivery system that takes into account the fact that persons of different cultures may have differing ways of experiencing arts and culture.

San Antonio Has a Relatively Young Population

Persons under the age of 5 comprise 8% of the population. Twenty-nine percent are under the age of 18. Only 10% of the citizenry are over 65. While 77% of the citizens are high school graduates, only 23% have a Bachelor's degree or higher.

Implication for cultural planning: Numerous studies have demonstrated that the greatest predictor of adult participation in the arts is exposure to the arts as a child. With arts education having been largely eliminated in the public schools in Texas and elsewhere in the nation, it has fallen to the nonprofit cultural sector to provide this arts education and exposure. Indeed, according to The Arts Dynamic: A Survey of Arts Education in San Antonio Area Schools for the 1999-2000 School Year, San Antonio's arts and cultural organizations provided services to more than 150,000 Kindergarten through 12th grade students in the 1999-2000 school year. San Antonio must redouble its efforts to reintroduce the arts back into the school curriculum.

"Arts are a way of telling the story of what happens in the community. Too often, poor people are portrayed negatively. In Human Services, the arts can also express vision and hope for the future."

Community Initiatives Director

San Antonio Has an Economically Disadvantaged Population

Median household money income in 1999 was just $38,238, while fully 16% of the citizenry have incomes below the federal poverty level. The home ownership rate is relatively high, at 61% (2000), but the median value of owner-occupied units is just $74,100. According to the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis, in 2000, San Antonio ranked 19th in per capita personal income among 20 cities with comparable demographics.

Implication for cultural planning: With many citizens possessing modest household incomes, widespread arts participation may be dependent upon the availability of free or low-cost arts activities. This may be one reason that festivals and outdoor events have been so successful. It will also be important that a range of family-oriented cultural activities be available in San Antonio.

The Cultural Environment

San Antonio Has a History of Arts and Cultural Studies and Planning

San Antonio has developed a number of relevant studies and plans prior to The Cultural Collaborative that represent a sustained effort to identify and address the community's cultural needs. In many cases, the previous work identified similar issues to those addressed in TCC. TCC has built on this accumulated knowledge and utilized it to focus and inform the planning effort.

"We must not reinforce bad land-use planning that takes people out of the city and into the suburbs."

Business executive

1988 Blue Ribbon Committee on the Arts

This report, delivered at the request of then-Mayor Henry Cisneros, examined the current role of the City of San Antonio in delivering arts and cultural services to the citizens. It made six priority recommendations: 1) Create a Department of Arts and Cultural Affairs headed by a professional arts administrator; 2) Complete a written cultural plan; 3) Dedicate a source of public revenue; 4) Strengthen the Arts and Cultural Advisory Committee; 5) Complete necessary improvements at Lila Cockrell Theater and Beethoven Hall; and 6) Support culturally diverse participation on boards and staffs, programming and audiences.

1991 Economic Impact Report on the Arts in San Antonio

This study reported that nonprofit cultural organizations had an overall economic impact of $596 million on expenditures in the economy of San Antonio in the 1990-91 budget year. Over 1.5 million people attended nonprofit cultural events during that year, including dance, theater, music performances, special events and art exhibitions. Of these 1.5 million attendees, 41% were offered free of charge. Nonprofit arts organizations subsidized 615,000 admissions. San Antonio's nonprofit organizations as a whole were one of the City's largest employers, with nearly 700 full- and part-time employees. The annual economic impact of visitors' arts-related spending on total expenditures in San Antonio was more than $445 million.

1993 Department of Arts and Cultural Affairs Strategic Plan

This plan, developed internally, identified seven priority goals: 1) To maintain and develop arts funding; 2) To implement initiatives to expand arts audiences; 3) To facilitate increased public dialogue on timely cultural issues; 4) To lead efforts, city-wide, to make the arts basic to education; 5) To shape a long-term cultural facilities plan; 6) To initiate and further international cultural exchange ventures; and 7) To continue development of governance, systems and structure for the Department of Arts and Cultural Affairs.

1995 San Antonio Arts Participation Survey

This report, based on a telephone survey of 400 San Antonio citizens, made several key findings: 1) San Antonio compares favorably to other cities of similar size in terms of arts participation; 2) Different market profiles of various segments of the population suggest different marketing challenges for local arts and cultural organizations; 3) Universal understanding of the value of the arts for children is a “communication entry point” even for people who do not relate to the arts; 4) Price sensitivity is a major issue for San Antonio arts consumers – more so for current attendees and less so for non-attendees; 5) Learning about other cultures is a strong value among adults; 6) San Antonio adults broadly recognize the social value of the arts and believe that the City should support local arts and cultural organizations; and 7) Respondents indicated a high likelihood that new information services and ticket distribution methods should be used.

2001 The Arts Dynamic: A Survey of Arts Education in San Antonio Area Schools for the 1999-2000 School Year

This study by the San Antonio Arts in Education Task Force received survey responses for 19 local arts organizations. The data revealed that arts organizations offered predominantly free arts instruction and arts appreciation to every public school district in Bexar County, as well as to 136 private schools. San Antonio arts organizations’ programs served 150,000 K-12 students in 1999-2000. This represents more than half of the 255,634 students enrolled in public schools that year. Fine arts experiences occurred in some of the 13 San Antonio public school districts, but not in all, and not consistently. Music was the art form with the most specialists. Dance and theatre had the fewest teachers. Though visual arts instruction was at its highest levels (60%) at the elementary grades, there were questions about the overall consistency of the instruction.

“...it’s tough. Advocacy is needed. There is an attitude of benign neglect now. Teachers, parents and principals don’t understand the benefits of arts education. Many immigrant parents don’t speak up.”

2002 Arts Programming Survey

In Fall 2002, the Office of Cultural Affairs surveyed 115 local arts and cultural organizations (67 responded) to determine: 1) Current and desired programming levels, including funding sources and program priorities; 2) Obstacles inhibiting new program development and successful fundraising; 3) Use of city-owned facilities for office space, performances and exhibitions; and 4) Need for technical and management training/assistance programs. Some of the key findings include: 1) only 27% of responding organizations are housed in city-owned facilities; 2) only 41% of respondents own their own facility; 3) Many responding groups reported direct collaborations with organizations, particularly educational institutions; 4) New program plans were being developed in the areas of support for individual artists, cultural exchange, cultural tourism and marketing initiatives; 5) Lack of funding was cited as the major obstacle in developing new programs, along with lack of staff; 6) 37 organizations had budgets of less than $100,000, 20 had budgets between $100,000 and $1,000,000 and 10 had budgets more than $1,000,000; 7) Most organizations cited lack of staff and lack of time as major obstacles to successful fundraising; 8) 63% of organizations reported that they have no staff dedicated specifically to fundraising; and 9) Most organizations identified audience development/outreach and information technology as their most pressing technical assistance needs.

2003 Finding Ways: A Conference on Art, Culture & Economic Development in San Antonio

This conference was attended by more than 450 people who represented a cross-section of the city, with an emphasis on arts, culture and business. The purpose of the conference was to engage the community in a dialogue to kick-off the effort to develop The Cultural Collaborative, and to understand the collaboration necessary to implement the strategies. One of the primary focuses was to explore the interconnectedness of arts, culture and creativity to economic development. Six specific challenges to local cultural development were noted:

"The challenge for [my company] is hiring enough qualified creative people. We are adding 12 per month at three times the average San Antonio salary. Better arts and culture, and better places, make it more attractive for potential employees."

Creative business executive

Exhausted funding sources. Mirroring a nationwide phenomenon, funding for the arts in San Antonio is down from every source – earned income and contributed income from corporations, foundations and individual patrons, as well as public sector subsidies. San Antonio is particularly challenged on several levels. It has few local corporate headquarters where business support might be garnered. It also has few sizeable foundations and none at which the arts are a primary funding priority. The City also presents a challenge. It, like many American cities, has a structural shortfall in its General Fund budget and tax revenues have not kept pace with growing demand for public services.

Implication for cultural planning: In order to ensure long-term stability of the city's nonprofit cultural organizations, the City must seek a new dedicated revenue stream to support the arts. Several major American cities (St. Louis, Denver, and Salt Lake City) have met this challenge by developing a cultural funding district supported by either property taxes or sales taxes.

Inadequate mix of facilities and resources. While the need for new cultural facilities did not emerge as the highest priority during the planning process, many planning participants noted the growing deferred maintenance in existing cultural facilities. Because of the City's budget problems, preventive maintenance on City-owned cultural facilities has been neglected in favor of providing basic public services to the citizens.

Implication for cultural planning: The City should develop a program to address the deferred maintenance of its cultural facilities and should explore a program to give matching grants for maintenance of cultural facilities not owned by the City.

Undercapitalized nonprofit organizations: Few, if any of San Antonio's nonprofit organizations, have financial resources that would constitute adequate capitalization. According to the National Arts Stabilization Fund, a nonprofit cultural organization is considered to be adequately capitalized if it has 50% of its annual operating budget in a cash flow reserve and enough endowment to generate 5% of its annual operating expenditures.

Implication for cultural planning: The long term solution to this challenge is not readily apparent. While several cities have successfully created stabilization funds, many more have failed. Given the relatively modest resources in the corporate and foundation realms in San Antonio, it is highly doubtful that a stabilization effort would succeed.

Lack of communication among the cultural sector: As the Wolf, Keens & Co. preplanning study noted, the cultural sector is fragmented. It observed that City residents do not experience the arts in their neighborhoods and that instead, the arts are focused in the downtown area. It noted that the arts and culture are not integrated into public education which creates a disconnect for young people. It also noted that there was little effort to share audience information.

“These are the elements that would help foster a ‘sense of place’ in San Antonio:

- Downtown planning for residents first, tourists second
- Developing a broader reach of existing cultural assets
- Support for cultural entrepreneurs
- Long- and short-term investment in recreational resources
- Marketing San Antonio’s authenticity”

Creative business executive

Implication for cultural planning: Nonprofit cultural organizations have historically been reticent to share audience information. This comes from the erroneous notion that audiences represent a zero-sum pool, where the choice to patronize one cultural organization necessarily means that another does not get patronized. In the cities where cultural organizations have pooled their marketing information, there is a net increase in overall cultural attendance. This may suggest that a new approach to shared marketing might find fertile ground in San Antonio.

Lack of awareness about activities in the cultural sector: The TCC public opinion survey indicates a general lack of awareness in the community about the availability of arts and cultural programs in San Antonio. While many citizens reported attending a festival or public celebration one or more times each year, much smaller numbers were reported to have attended a performance or exhibition each year. When asked about ways San Antonio’s arts environment and cultural life could be made better, the most frequent response was “more advertising, marketing or publicity.” It was noted by many planning participants that the attention of the local print media to the arts is minimal.

Implication for cultural planning: It is an unfortunate phenomenon that when nonprofit cultural organizations feel a budget squeeze, one of the first areas to be cut is the marketing budget. While that may seem counterintuitive, the reality is that cultural organizations generally have high fixed costs associated with personnel, facility maintenance and production costs. Marketing, in many cases, is one of the few discretionary costs that can be managed.

Lack of awareness about the importance of the arts to education, revitalization, economic development and cultural tourism: It is only in the past few years that cities around the nation have come to realize that the arts play a vital role in many sectors beyond the cultural. Numerous studies have demonstrated that the arts can significantly improve general educational achievement. Cities are realizing that the development of new cultural facilities and arts programming can be the catalyst to start the revitalization of blighted neighborhoods. Communities have begun promoting cultural development as a powerful economic development tool, as cities compete for creative and talented persons and enterprises. And cities like San Antonio, where tourism is one of the most significant industries, have learned that the cultural tourist stays longer and spends more than the average tourist.

Implication for cultural planning: These realities suggest that the cultural sector in San Antonio must develop new strategic partnerships to leverage its scarce resources for maximum impact. Partnerships should be forged with the educational system, with the Convention and Visitors' Bureau, with the chambers of commerce, with the neighborhood associations.

2003 Cultural Pre-planning Report

This study, by Wolf, Keens & Co., assessed San Antonio's preparedness for a cultural plan. Several key observations were made: 1) Existing support of arts and culture provides a solid foundation; 2) Nonprofit cultural organizations are under-capitalized; 3) The commercial cultural sector in San Antonio is strong; 4) There is a lack of recognition of the cultural sector in San Antonio; 5) The cultural sector is fragmented; 6) There is a shortage of reliable data on the cultural sector; 7) The current mix of cultural facilities is inadequate; 8) There is potential for a significantly more effective cultural sector; and 9) Public sector funding comes primarily from a single source.

San Antonio's History of City Support

Since the 1970s, the City of San Antonio has provided funding and support for the arts; at first arts funding came directly from the City Council to individual arts organizations. In an effort to de-politicize the process, the Arts Council of San Antonio was formed as a 501(c)(3) organization to receive funds from the City's General Fund and then re-grant them to other organizations. In time, the Arts Council was dissolved and in 1984-85, the funding process was pulled back into the City as a "Cultural Arts Program" within the Department of Parks and Recreation, still funded from the General Fund. The program was advised by the Cultural Arts Board, comprised of 11 members, each representing a City Council District, and a mayor's appointee.

In 1987, then-mayor Henry Cisneros established a Blue Ribbon Committee to study the state of the arts in San Antonio. Their report made two key recommendations. The first was that arts and cultural programming was vital to the citizens of San Antonio and deserved to be addressed by a Department of Arts and Cultural Affairs on an equal footing with other City departments. Secondly, the report recognized that arts and cultural institutions along with their collections and events were key reasons visitors chose to come to San Antonio. And, since tourism was at that time the second largest industry, it would be appropriate to provide funding to these organizations from the Hotel/Motel tax to the extent allowable by law.

Accordingly, in 1989, the City Council approved the establishment of the Department of Arts and Cultural Affairs as an independent department of the City and established the Hotel/Motel tax as the source of its funding. Although the name of the Department changed to the Office of Cultural Affairs in 1997, the organizational structure and funding sources have remained the same.

The Office of Cultural Affairs currently has a budget of $3.3 million, or about $2.50 per capita, derived from approximately 7% of hotel/motel tax (Texas state law allows up to 15% to be allocated to the arts). This compares to a national average of about $5 per capita for the 50 largest cities. In 2002, San Antonio spent $2.78 per capita on the arts and culture, while Dallas spent $11.92, Austin spent $7.97, and Houston spent $4.33.

Comparative Status of San Antonio

In the year 2000, the City of Atlanta commissioned the Andrew Young School of Policy Studies at Georgia State University to do a comparative study of the state of the arts in 20 American cities. San Antonio was among those cities, which included Baltimore, Charlotte, Dallas, Denver, Houston, Miami, Phoenix, San Diego, San Jose and Seattle, among others. Their report, entitled The Arts in 20 Cities: Where Does Atlanta Stand, contains much information useful to San Antonio.

San Antonio has Fewer, Smaller Nonprofit Arts and Cultural Organizations

In 1997, according to the National Center for Charitable Statistics, San Antonio ranked 19th among the 20 cities in the number of arts nonprofits, with 90. That compares to 801 for Boston (#1) or 311 for Dallas (#4). San Antonio ranked 18th in the number of arts nonprofits per capita.

According to the same source, San Antonio also ranked 18th in total revenues of arts nonprofits per capita. In earned revenues of arts nonprofits per capital, San Antonio ranked 20th and in contributed revenues, it ranked 18th. In average profitability per arts nonprofit organization, San Antonio fared somewhat better, in 12th place.

San Antonio Relies More on Public Dollars

San Antonio's cultural organizations rely very heavily upon public subsidies. These subsidies as a percentage of total revenue (unearned revenues divided by total revenues), at 6%, placed San Antonio with the 4th highest ranking.

The study examined the number of accredited institutions of higher learning in the arts: art schools, dance schools, theater schools and music schools. San Antonio ranked 16th, with five – four music schools and one art school.

San Antonio ranked 8th among art museums per capita, with nine. It ranked 6th among the 20 cities in the number of performing arts seats per one thousand residents, with eight seats.

Looking at just the eight southern cities in the study, San Antonio ranked 7th in total revenues of arts nonprofits per capital; 8th in donated revenues to arts nonprofits per capital and 7th in the number of nonprofit arts organizations per million inhabitants.

The study cited “Places Rated Almanac,” which covers many lifestyle, economic, institutional, and environmental factors, including the arts. San Antonio ranked 139th among the 300 cities evaluated on arts and cultural criteria. A similar report by Money Magazine, “Best Place to Live,” ranked San Antonio at 168th among cities on arts and cultural criteria.

Political Realities

During the planning process, the consultant team met with every member of the City Council, as well as the Mayor and the City Manager. While many of the Council members had specific agendas relating to their districts, each expressed strong support for the arts and culture in San Antonio and an awareness of the vital role that arts and cultural programming plays in the life of the city. There was a general awareness of the fact that San Antonio lags behind comparable cities in the level of local public support of the arts and culture. However, the consultant team was reminded on numerous occasions about the challenges the City faces in providing for basic public services for the citizens of San Antonio. It was noted that the City has not had a general tax increase in more than a decade. The passage of the transportation bond issue in 2004 was cited as evidence that the people of San Antonio, while generally averse to tax increases, will respond to well-articulated campaigns related to compelling community needs. The recently completed TCC opinion survey offers evidence that support for the arts and culture may be viewed as a compelling community need. When asked whether the “City government should spend more in support of the arts and cultural events,” on a scale of 1 to 7 (1 being strongly disagree, 7 being strongly agree) 63% responded with a 5 or higher, with 31% responding with a 7. Similarly, more than 60% agreed that “more of the City budget should be provided to enhance development of arts and cultural activities in San Antonio.” Finally, when asked the likelihood that they would “support an additional $5 per year in taxes” to support the arts, 73% agreed that they would support the increase.

The other notable political reality is the nature of City government. The City Council members represent 10 separate Council Districts. Only the Mayor is elected by the city at large. This District representation means that each Council member must attend, first and foremost, to the narrow concerns of his or her own District. This, by its nature, discourages focus on citywide issues, such as arts and cultural development. Another factor is the length of Council terms and term limits. Council members are limited to two two-year terms. This, in turn, encourages short-term thinking and planning. It also means that there is the possibility, every two years, of a major turnover in the elected leadership of the city.

Implications for cultural planning. The implementation of San Antonio's cultural plan will require dedicated and sustained advocacy on the part of the cultural constituency. To be effective, advocacy on behalf of TCC and other cultural issues will need to be unified and disciplined. This level of advocacy will be necessary to provide support to elected officials who will champion cultural issues, and to "make the case" to voters for ballot initiatives.

STRATEGIES

The strategies are organized according to the five objectives of TCC (see page 11).

Access

Objective: To provide greater access to the arts and culture to residents throughout San Antonio.

San Antonio is a Cultural City

San Antonio is a city that values and participates in the arts and culture. According to the TCC public opinion survey (page 77), 93% of all residents participate in at least one cultural activity each year, 70% attend a church or neighborhood festival and 61% visit a museum or art gallery. Parents seek out cultural activities for their children—54% of households with children have a child participating in the arts outside of school. Nonetheless, increasing access to the arts and culture for all of San Antonio was a fundamental message from the community throughout the TCC planning process. Participants spoke often and convincingly about the concentration of cultural resources in the downtown area and the need to make programs and venues more available throughout the city. Parents in the outlying neighborhoods, City Council members, and arts professionals all articulated a similar vision of “bringing the arts and culture to everyone” throughout all quadrants of the city.

Improving access encompasses several related issues:

- Bringing the arts and culture to the neighborhoods
- Making the arts and culture relevant to diverse cultures
- Ensuring cultural equity
- Expanding arts and cultural education
- Improving marketing

Bring the Arts and Culture to the Neighborhoods

Making the arts and culture available throughout all geographic areas of the city is a practical response to San Antonio’s urban reality. San Antonio, like many American cities, has grown into a collection of far-flung and sometimes disparate neighborhoods. Residents seek to enjoy a sense of local community in their neighborhoods and the “hassle

“As you move out from the City’s center, there are fewer and fewer services and facilities.”

Senior Citizen Focus Group participant

factor” of traveling between areas of the city makes it all the more important to have services available locally.

The arts and culture are seen as a way of reinforcing and celebrating the unique character of each neighborhood and increasing civic participation by having programs nearby.

“One of the important roles of festivals is to bring diverse peoples together.”

Senior Citizen Focus Group participant

Make the Arts and Culture Relevant to Diverse Cultures

Access is more than geography, however. TCC participants identified many barriers to access, including cost, transportation, time, information about available programs, cultural relevancy, language, education about art and culture, and physical handicaps. San Antonio’s socio-economic indicators reflect some of these barriers. Bexar County income and educational levels are lower than national averages, while poverty and disability levels are higher. The predominant culture is Mexicano and nearly half of all households speak a language other than English at home. Clearly, improving access will require arts and cultural programs that address the actual circumstances and interests of the population.

TCC participants spoke about the need for arts and cultural programs that are relevant to the cultural backgrounds of San Antonio’s residents. This spans a breadth of programs from the San Antonio Symphony to the Tejano Conjunto Festival, and from art classes at the Southwest School of Art and Craft to the multicultural performance series of the Carver Community Cultural Center. Having a broad definition of the arts and culture is as important as having available a range of programs. They are seen as serving the interests of a culturally diverse population

“The problem in San Antonio is that the arts are conceived as elitist—the arts just aren’t central to people’s lives.”

Senior Citizen Focus Group participant

while also providing various “entry points” for residents to participate in arts and culture. Recent national studies of arts participation suggest that this approach is essential to overcoming barriers to participation. A 1999 RAND Corporation study, A New Framework for Building Participation in the Arts, suggests that strategies to increase arts participation need to consider carefully the audiences they are trying to target. Similarly, strategies aimed at audiences that are not currently predisposed to the arts will need to change individual attitudes toward the arts.

Ensure Cultural Equity

Cultural equity emerged from the early phases of the community process as an important issue and one that is central to improving access (Cultural Equity, page 12). San Antonio’s demographics alone strongly suggest the need to address this issue. According to the 2000 U.S. Census, San Antonio is the eighth largest U.S. city, with approximately 1.1 million residents. Its population includes 58% persons of Hispanic origin and 7% African Americans. National research indicates that arts participation varies by ethnicity, so that cultural factors are key to increasing arts and cultural participation. For example, participation among Hispanics and African Americans is lower than among Caucasians by conventional measures of attendance, while Hispanics participate more often through festivals and family-oriented events. San Antonio, with its majority Mexicano culture, is known for its cultural festivals and has a number of culturally specific arts organizations, including prominent institutions such as the Guadalupe Cultural Center and the Carver Community Cultural Center that are rooted in and reflective of communities of color. Many other arts and cultural organizations serve diverse populations through their programming. Nonetheless, the TCC Executive Committee and other planning participants defined cultural equity as an ongoing goal that includes mutual respect for diverse cultures and the fair distribution of resources among cultural communities. The Executive Committee discussed cultural equity in some detail and drafted a vision statement (page 77); planning team member Pablo Martinez also prepared an equity statement (page 12). Both can serve as the basis for development of a cultural equity policy.

Expand Arts and Cultural Education

Another important element of access is education about arts and culture. People who have had more arts education are much more likely to attend the arts, and arts education is the strongest factor in predicting arts

“How can we tackle arts education, when Texas doesn’t have a handle on public education generally?”

Arts Education Focus Group participant

attendance, according to Effects of Arts Education on Participation in the Arts (National Endowment for the Arts Report, 1996). Also, the role of arts education in positive student outcomes has been thoroughly documented in the past generation. For example, Champions of Change: The Impact of the Arts on Learning, published in 2000 by the President’s Committee on the Arts and Humanities, is a compilation of national research on the impact of arts education on student learning and success. This report concludes, “If we are to equip young people for professionally and personally rewarding careers, we must give them greatly enriched experiences [through the arts and humanities.]”

Arts and cultural education has been a subject of concern and action in San Antonio among the arts and cultural community for many years. Partially in response to a lack of such education, San Antonio’s arts and cultural organizations and artists have provided programs to schools and lifelong learning to the general public on an ongoing basis. In recent years, the City of San Antonio identified arts education as a priority in its 1993 Department of Arts and Cultural Affairs Strategic Plan. The 1995 San Antonio Arts Participation Survey documented the public’s shared understanding of the value of arts education. And in 2001, San Antonio’s Arts Education Task Force prepared a landmark study, The Arts Dynamic: A Survey & Analysis of Arts Education in San Antonio Area Schools for the 1999-2000 School Year, which documented the state of arts education throughout Bexar County. According to The Arts Dynamic, San Antonio’s public and private schools provide a measure of arts and cultural education but face significant gaps in services and resources. At the same time, San Antonio's arts and cultural organizations provide fine arts programs to more than half of Bexar County's school children. This is an impressive amount of community service yet it falls far short of the comprehensive, sequential arts education needed to accomplish substantive outcomes with students. In short, it reflects the magnitude of need in the schools.

"Through the numerous grants we have made to arts organizations for work with youth, we have come to understand the importance of the arts in cognitive, social and emotional development. The documented decline of arts programming in our schools should be of great concern to all of us."

Private Foundation Director

Arts and cultural education is also the subject of recent state action. In 2004, the Texas State Board of Education (SBOE) adopted a statewide curriculum mandate for arts education. The SBOE requires that all school districts utilize Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills (TEKS), which include curriculum standards for art, dance, music and theatre. While this mandate is unfunded, it provides a new policy platform for systemic change at both the elementary and secondary levels.

TCC's goals for improving arts and cultural education include:

- Reintroducing to schools comprehensive, sequential arts education in art, dance, music and theatre for all students in all grades
- Providing more lifelong learning programs to the community, including after-school programs for students and continuing education for adults
- Inter-relating the programs in these two fields (in-school and lifelong learning)
- Serving under-served populations

There are significant local and statewide obstacles to achieving these goals that will require more than new and increased educational programs. Some of these obstacles relate to public awareness of the value of arts and cultural education, and others relate to Texas' ongoing challenges in financing public education. A long-term commitment to policy-level advocacy and change will be needed to address the systemic obstacles.

Improve Marketing

While San Antonio has a wealth of cultural resources, TCC participants discussed the practical difficulty of learning what is available. Currently, marketing is primarily the responsibility of individual cultural organizations, with some joint marketing provided by the Office of Cultural Affairs, the Convention and Visitors Bureau and others. Marketing efforts tend to be event-focused and less concerned with communitywide or institutional audience building. Some of San Antonio's marketing needs are traditional and well-understood: making information more systematic, comprehensive and user-friendly for diverse residents. Other marketing needs are subtle and will require innovation. Recent research suggests that marketing must adopt “new fundamentals” that do more than provide easy access to information. New Fundamentals and Practice to Increase Cultural Participation and Develop Arts Audiences (Gerald D. Yoshitomi, Grant Makers in the Arts Reader, Vol. II, No. 1, 2000) says that while the arts offer deeply meaningful and rewarding personal experiences, they are misperceived by many as elitist, unavailable or “not for me.” New Fundamentals counsels that audience development should specifically aim to change these misperceptions and provide new participants with positive experiences. This type of effort requires marketing that integrates event marketing with long-term strategies for audience building that address the underlying barriers to attendance.

“...43% of first time attenders did not attend events in the past because they were unaware of programs offered.”

1995 Market Research Study

Access Strategies

1. Develop a network of neighborhood “cultural captains.”

A network of “cultural captains” will provide an ongoing, two-way link between the arts and cultural community and the neighborhoods. The two objectives of this network are to facilitate arts and cultural programs in local areas, and to help generate participation in programs taking place in other areas of the city. Cultural captains need not be “arts people,” which will serve to broaden the dialogue and understanding of the overall access effort. The network should determine how often it needs to meet and how to coordinate with other marketing and outreach efforts.

Lead Agency:	CASA, in partnership with Neighborhood Resource Center, Westside Coalition and OCA
Begins:	2005/06
Resources Needed:	Staff resources

2. Develop a Neighborhood Arts “Catalogue” of arts classes, exhibitions, performing arts groups and literary arts programs, supported by matching grants from the City to neighborhood based organizations, such as schools, libraries and churches.

A “catalogue” of performing, visual and literary programs and classes is a vehicle to deliver arts services in the outlying neighborhoods at relatively low cost. Groups and individuals would be invited to apply for inclusion in the catalogue. Neighborhood groups, churches, schools and social organizations would be eligible for matching grants from OCA to support the programs they select from the catalogue.

Lead Agency:	OCA, in partnership with Neighborhood Resource Center, Library Department
Begins:	2006/07
Resources Needed:	$30,000 for catalogue production and distribution; $50,000 annually for matching grants.

3. Develop an inventory of available cultural venues and potential venues, and provide referrals and incentives to make the spaces more available for arts and cultural programs.

Making better use of existing venues is the simplest way to address the lack of cultural facilities, and this information is currently not available in any comprehensive manner. Cultural venues to be inventoried should include not only the established cultural venues but also parks, libraries, school facilities (including Edgewood Academy of Fine Arts), community centers, colleges, KellyUSA and Brooks City Base. Once the inventory is complete, staff should provide information and referrals to help facilitate venue use.

Lead Agency: OCA
Begins: 2005/06
Resources Needed: Staff resources

4. Acquire a well-equipped portable stage to support festivals and special events in parks and neighborhood settings.

A frequent comment about barriers to cultural programming in the neighborhoods was the lack of appropriate venues. A portable stage with the technical capacity for a broad variety of performing arts uses will meet many of these needs. To fulfill its purpose, specifications for the portable stage should be carefully identified in consultation with potential users. Fees for its use should be kept to affordable levels and/or subsidized through grants.

Lead Agency: Parks and Recreation Department
Begins: 2006/07
Resources Needed: $400,000 for equipment purchase

5. Develop, within OCA, a “one-stop” permitting process for festivals and special events, coordinating all city support services—police, street closures, sanitation, etc.

Another frequent comment about barriers to cultural programming in the neighborhoods was the difficulty of navigating the permitting process. Coordinating this process within OCA will provide the public with an arts-friendly staff person who can clarify the requirements and facilitate the permitting process.

Lead Agency: Economic Development Department, OCA, Parks and Recreation Department
Begins: 2006/07
Resources Needed: Staff resources, including new staff position ($35,000)

6. Establish an affordable fee schedule for cultural organizations and festivals to use city-owned venues.

Venue fees are a major impediment to increased cultural programming in the neighborhoods. Reducing costs, along with more readily available information about venues, will increase programming in areas throughout the city, at relatively low cost.

Lead Agency: OCA, Parks and Recreation Department
Begins: 2006/07
Resources Needed: Staff resources

7. Develop “Opportunity San Antonio,” a program of board training with special outreach to persons of color wishing to participate in the governance of San Antonio’s cultural institutions.

Cultural organizations that are criticized for not having ethnically diverse boards frequently complain that they are unable to identify “qualified” candidates. This proposed program would provide board training for persons wishing to serve on cultural boards, while at the same time allowing the cultural institutions to introduce their organization to a pool of trained and committed potential board members.

Lead Agency: Local chambers of commerce, Nonprofit Resource Center, Neighborhood Resource Center, OCA
Begins: 2006/07
Resources Needed: Part-time staff plus related program expense

8. Establish a partnership to address arts and cultural education on a policy level through leadership, research, planning and advocacy.

A partnership of CASA’s Arts Education Task Force, TCC, OCA, the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, school district officials and other stakeholders, should be formed to address arts and cultural education in a comprehensive manner. The partnership should convene a leadership group to develop a communitywide arts education policy and a plan, including a comprehensive advocacy and community awareness program. Advocacy will need to address both state and local issues, and the partners should compile a research compendium to support advocacy efforts. They should also identify local model schools and programs, and document their educational outcomes as case studies.

Lead Agency: CASA’s Arts Education Task Force, TCC, OCA, Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, school district officials. Other stakeholders to be added as appropriate.

Begins: 2005/06

Resources Needed: Staff resources plus potential research costs

9. Make existing arts education resources more available through information and referrals, coordination of existing programs, and development of a comprehensive resource directory.

The partnership described in the previous recommendation can strengthen linkages among school-based and lifelong learning programs by convening program managers to network, share plans and identify collaborative opportunities.

OCA should convene an inter-departmental COSA committee to identify and develop arts education opportunities within City programs. Departments include Community Initiatives, Libraries and Parks & Recreation.

The partnership, through the efforts of CASA's Arts Education Task Force, should develop a comprehensive resource directory, available on-line and in printed form. The resource directory will become an ongoing program, requiring staff resources to keep information up-to-date, and to provide information and referrals.

Lead Agency: OCA in partnership with CASA's Arts Education Task Force for the resource directory

Begins: 2007/08

Resources Needed: $50,000 for resource directory, plus staff assistance

10. Create an arts and cultural education staff position to support the arts and cultural education partnership.

For the first five years of the arts and cultural education partnership, OCA should provide funding for a dedicated staff position housed at OCA. CASA's Arts Education Task Force should take primary responsibility for defining and hiring this position. This position and its funding should be evaluated after (or before) five years, to assure appropriate ongoing staffing and support for the partnership. Staff efforts should be directed to support of the partnership, not to providing programming to students.

Lead Agency: OCA

Begins: 2006/07

Resources Needed: $35,000

11. Strengthen the programming and arts education curricula at the three arts magnet schools.

The efforts of all three arts magnet schools—Edgewood Fine Arts Academy, Thomas Jefferson High School and North East School of the Arts—can be strengthened by increased communication and coordination. The arts and cultural partnership should facilitate convening of these schools on a regular basis to share information, identify common issues, explore potential collaborations and advocate for improvements.

Lead Agency:	Edgewood Fine Arts Academy, Thomas Jefferson High School, North East School of the Arts, CASA's Arts Education Task Force, OCA and TCC.
Begins:	2007/08
Resources Needed:	TBD

12. Create a scholarship program for students and continuing education program for artists.

TCC should establish a competitive scholarship program, administered by OCA, to provide funding for students interested in careers in the arts and culture. In keeping with the commitment to lifelong learning, it should also establish a continuing education fund for artists to attend workshops and conferences, and undertake other study and travel. Even modest awards can provide important assistance to students and artists for their learning, and bring public attention to the achievements of San Antonio's young and established artists.

Lead Agency:	TCC & OCA
Begins:	2007/08
Resources Needed:	$25,000 annually

13. Strengthen communitywide marketing of San Antonio's arts and cultural organizations and events to residents.

Communitywide marketing should aim to both increase attendance for specific events and address long-term audience building needs. This includes supporting and expanding OCA's marketing program and website through such efforts as:

- Facilitating the exchange of audience data among arts and cultural organizations, and/or the development of a communitywide audience list.

- Developing packages of “custom made seasons” that allow patrons to pick and choose among the offerings of several organizations.
- Continuing support for and development of packages such as the “Fall Arts Festival.”

Local marketing should coordinate closely with communitywide advocacy and outreach (page 56) and with the cultural and heritage tourism program (page 50).

Lead Agency: OCA, in partnership with local cultural organizations and CVB

Begins: 2006/07

Resources Needed: Staff resources and related program expenses

Economic Development

Objective: To promote the economic growth of San Antonio's creative sector.

Develop San Antonio's Creative Economy

The Cultural Collaborative is founded in part on the observation that San Antonio's creative economy is an important and under-recognized economic sector, and that the community as a whole will benefit from development of the sector. At the beginning of the process, the TCC Steering Committee identified planning for the creative sector of San Antonio's economy as a priority. TCC's opening event, the November 2003 Finding Ways Conference, featured economist Dr. Richard Florida as its keynote speaker. Florida's central thesis is that cities with stronger creative communities are more economically competitive. Investing in a vibrant cultural infrastructure helps attract and retain creative individuals and businesses that contribute to the local economy.

"Our success as a city is all about promoting imagination and creativity."

Community Forum Participant

Who is in the "Creative Community"??

Creative individuals include visual artists, performing artists, media artists, film makers, arts educators, craftspeople, designers, architects, writers, production technicians, and others.

Creative business include advertising, marketing, architecture, design, digital media, music and dance clubs, art galleries, art-related retail stores, film production and post-production, art-related printing, live theatres, festivals, and others.

Creative nonprofits include all types of arts and cultural organizations, historical and heritage organizations, arts-related departments within a college or university, and others.

Other recent research extends this idea farther—the creative sector is a significant growth industry that has been little understood and has lacked the benefit of economic development planning. For example, The Creative Economy Initiative's 2000 study, The Role of the Arts and Culture in New England's Economic Competitiveness, documents the scope and growth of that region's "creative cluster" within its overall economy: 3.5% of the region's total workforce is employed by the creative economy; the occupations that comprise this sector are growing at a rate of 14% as compared to 8% in New England overall; and it generates $6.6 billion dollars in tourism revenue alone.

Through our research we can see that there is a "Creative Economy" in New England that is made up of both nonprofit and commercial sectors, as well as a significant population of individuals engaged in or trained in artistic or cultural fields. This creative economy is a fundamental component of our regional economic environment. Our research also supports a new way of looking at the arts and culture as an industry cluster in much the same way as we view the financial services and technology industry clusters, among others. With this new information, we will be able to create and leverage extraordinary opportunities for collaborations that extend well beyond what is traditionally perceived as the “cultural community” to include business and government. The results will benefit every economic sector across New England.

That study led to the creation by New England’s regional chamber of commerce of a strategic economic development plan for its creative economy.

Focusing on the creative sector fits with San Antonio’s overall economic development strategies. San Antonio’s 2004 Strategic Plan for Enhanced Economic Development adopts a fundamental strategy of strengthening existing targeted industries. It also seeks to identify and focus on industries that possess the greatest potential for steady economic growth and a positive return on the community’s investment.

San Antonio’s creative sector has that potential. The preliminary results of an economic impact study of the creative sector conducted by Drs. Richard Butler and Mary Stefl, of Trinity University, shows a total annual output of at least $1.1 billion and total employment of approximately 11,000 jobs. This means that San Antonio’s creative sector has an economic impact comparable to other local industries targeted for economic development.

The Butler/Stefl study is corroborated in part by a second analysis of San Antonio’s creative community, conducted in 2004 by Americans for the Arts, based on data from Dun & Bradstreet.

There are at least 2,010 arts-related businesses throughout San Antonio.

This study identifies 2,010 arts-related businesses (including nonprofits), located throughout the city, that employ 10,411 people. Americans for the Arts notes that these figures are probably low, because the data on which the study is based does not count all arts nonprofits in the community.

The results of the Butler/Stefl study align with other national and local studies that have thoroughly documented the economic impact of this economic sector. Taken together, they demonstrate that the creative economy is more than a supporting player for other sectors of the economy. Americans for the Arts 2004 study, Creative Industries: Business & Employment in the Arts, shows that the arts—nonprofit and for-profit—account for 4.3% of all U.S. businesses and 2.2% of all U.S. employees. Americans for the Arts 2002 study, Arts & Economic Prosperity, documented that U.S. nonprofit arts organizations alone are a $134 billion industry that generates tax revenues equal to eight times total government spending on the arts. It also showed a 45% growth in output between 1992 and 2000.

“The City of San Antonio needs to recognize the cultural industry as an economic engine.”

Community Forum participant

The City has already initiated an effort to develop the local creative community, through the San Antonio Technology Accelerator Initiative (SATAI), a successful business incubator. In 2004, SATAI created a Digital Media Cluster to help support that portion of the creative community.

TCC participants identified several issues for economic development of San Antonio’s creative sector:

- Strategic planning for the creative sector
- Small business development
- Workforce development
- Supporting creative individuals
- Developing cultural districts
- Expanding cultural and heritage tourism

Strategic Planning for the Creative Sector is Essential

Strategic plans for the creative sector, such as the New England plan discussed above, offer new economic benefits to communities that create them. These plans are more common in European and Asian cities, and are now recognized in the U.S. as essential to achieving economic growth. The key factor in this type of planning is the application of well-established economic development tools to a new environment, the creative community.

This community, or economic sector, includes nonprofit organizations, for-profit businesses and individuals (sole proprietors), and has a particular set of needs. TCC serves as a strategic plan

“What is the core business of the City? Are we doing this? Are we doing it well? The City has a critical role in cultural development as an important economic generator.”

Creative Business Executive

for many aspects of the creative sector. However, additional strategic planning is required to more fully realize the growth potential of the sector.

Support Small Business Development

Creative businesses tend to be small businesses, ones that have basic needs for training, networking and access to capital. Still, the challenge of meeting these needs involves addressing the specialized backgrounds and requirements of the people who comprise the creative sector. The craftsperson selling artisan jewelry in a street fair or storefront gallery is typically an “arts person” who has more likely been educated at arts school rather than business school, and whose interest in, and understanding of, marketing may well be limited. The small entertainment software firm, with only a handful of employees, was probably founded by computer gamers and “geeks” who are successful by virtue of their creative passion and specialized expertise, not because of their business training. Similarly, banks and venture capitalists are often unfamiliar with the risks and potential rewards of these enterprises. Small business development must aim to develop skills, mutual understanding and new relationships that nurture the ecology of the creative sector. The success of these businesses is important to San Antonio’s economy not only for their direct fiscal impact but also, as Dr. Richard Florida asserts, because of their contribution to a creative and diverse community environment that is the seed bed of the creative sector.

Support Workforce Development

Workforce development, like small business development, is a fundamental economic development strategy. San Antonio currently has a number of college-level programs in creative fields, such as UTSA’s rapidly growing Architecture Department. Aligning San Antonio’s educational programs with the needs of its creative sector is a long-term strategy that benefits the educational institution as well as the creative community. This strategy is already in practice in San Antonio, through such initiatives as discussions between UTSA and SATAI to enhance digital media education at UTSA. Workforce development can begin at the high school level, as is currently done in San Antonio with academies that pair high schools with corporations in specific industries. It can also be supported by arts and cultural education incorporated into the elementary, middle and high school curriculum. Accordingly, involving economic development representation in initiatives to enhance arts and cultural education will strengthen the efforts of both.

Support Creative Individuals

The creative sector is populated by creative individuals, people who have specialized expertise in the arts or cultural fields. A key characteristic is the high level of their education, whether formal or informal. Lifelong learning is not only a part of the culture of the creative community, it is also a professional necessity. “Creatives” by nature are continually evolving and forging new directions and interests. This makes support for the creative individuals in the creative sector an important strategy for economic development.

Support for creative individuals includes aspects of workforce development, such as ongoing professional training and learning experiences. It also includes support for artists in the form of fellowships for the creation of new work, and other support services that foster a continually-evolving and well-networked arts and cultural community.

Develop Cultural Districts

San Antonio currently has several vibrant cultural districts, such as South Town, that capitalize on the community's unique built environment, heritage and artistic output. It also has additional areas with the potential to become cultural districts, or less formal cultural zones. TCC planning participants spoke about the value of cultural places in the city, and the ways in which these places serve related community needs. Cultural districts provide a public meeting ground for the community, they are an economic generator, and they help keep creative people in San Antonio. They can serve tourists, as well as residents, and offer a more genuine experience than a "tourist zone." Cultural districts are also a powerful tool for historic preservation and revitalization, two longstanding priorities in San Antonio.

"I have personal memories of the theater district on Houston. We were far better than we thought we were and we need to reclaim that."

TCC Review Focus Group participant

Expand Cultural and Heritage Tourism

Cultural and heritage tourism is now a well-established and -understood strategy for economic development. The cultural traveler offers many advantages to the tourism industry, staying longer and spending far more than the average, and sometimes filling off-peak time periods. Cultural tourism also offers the prospect of converting day visitors into overnight visitors, and encouraging visitors to move beyond the Riverwalk into other downtown areas (including HemisFair Park) and into the neighborhoods. Cultural tourism is also an integral strategy of San Antonio's competitor and benchmark cities, such as New Orleans. San Antonio has rich cultural and historic resources that currently enhance its tourism, and the City ranks highest among comparable cities for these attractions. Historic sites are currently the third-highest reason, behind general sight-seeing and theme parks, for visitors' decisions to come to San Antonio. San Antonio's festivals are already a major draw. The Convention and Visitors' Bureau currently has no distinct cultural tourism program or budget but agency staff plan to create one, and to reshape the community's brand to better reflect and capitalize on its unique cultural identity.

"Cultural tourism must begin with those things that define or identify our community."

Community Forum Participant

San Antonio has a strong financial incentive to expand cultural tourism, since tourism is directly related to the Convention and Visitors Facilities Fund (“hotel occupancy tax”). Because of the greater average spending of the cultural traveler, cultural tourism programs can result in significant increases in tax revenues.

“San Antonio must expand its visitor zone beyond the Riverwalk and the Alamo.”
Community Forum participant

Cultural and heritage tourism offers benefits to the creative community as well. Businesses, nonprofit organizations and events that appeal and can be made accessible to tourists can realize gains in attendance, exposure and even contributions. It is important to note, however, that tourism programs require the development of mutual understanding among cultural organizations, the tourism industry and the managers of the program. For example, arts organizations often need to reshape programs and make other changes to enhance the visitor’s experience. Tourism businesses must learn the requirements and limits of cultural events and organizations. Ongoing communication, planning and negotiation are required to forge a “win-win” program.

TCC planning participants articulated another hope for cultural and heritage tourism. As discussed in the Authenticity and Creativity section (page 59), there was ample discussion of the desire to present a more authentic face of San Antonio to the visitor. Properly done, cultural and heritage tourism can highlight and support the most authentic and therefore desirable aspects of San Antonio, the ones that residents value most.

Economic Development Strategies

14. Identify and pursue economic growth opportunities within San Antonio's creative economy through strategic planning for the sector.

Strategic planning, building on the 2004 economic impact study and other TCC efforts, is the next step in economic development for the creative community. In addition, the following tasks are derived primarily from San Antonio's 2004 Strategic Plan for Enhanced Economic Development:

- Conduct an economic impact study of the creative industry and conduct a cluster analysis of the creative industry.
- Include The Cultural Collaborative as a member of the Economic Roundtable.
- Enhance efforts to recruit, expand, and retain targeted businesses.
- Create an Arts and Culture Committee in partnership with chambers of commerce.
- Implement the San Antonio Technology Accelerator Initiative action plans, particularly with respect to fostering the growth of the digital media cluster.
- Promote the further development of San Antonio as a cultural and heritage tourist destination.
- Identify, support, and champion public/private investments in infrastructure necessary to support the growth of the creative sector.

Lead Agency: EDD, in partnership with OCA and San Antonio Inc. Additional partners could include the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, SATAI, CVB, and representatives of creative businesses.

Begins: Immediate (Economic Impact Study is underway)

Resources: Staff resources

15. Provide small business assistance targeted at creative businesses, including sole proprietorships.

Creative businesses are typically small businesses. Small business assistance, adapted to meet the needs of creative businesses and individuals, is a powerful tactic for economic growth within the sector:

- Create a nonprofit incubator to manage the business affairs of creative businesses and provide business training; the incubator should also assist emerging nonprofit arts and cultural organizations.
- Establish a business training program for creative businesses, modeled on SATAI.

- Develop and enhance programs that provide access to capital and credit for small creative businesses.

Lead Agency: EDD, in partnership with OCA and San Antonio Inc. Additional partners could include SATAI, South Texas Business Fund, chambers of commerce, UTSA Institute for Economic Development, ACCION Texas, Community Development Loan Fund, Nonprofit Resource Center.

Begins: 2007/08

Resources: Staff resources plus program funding to be determined through strategic planning

16. Foster and support the development of the creative workforce.

Workforce development should address the specific needs of the creative sector, including training in creative fields, arts and cultural education (K – 12), and ongoing professional development. Specific strategies should be developed through strategic planning and should include:

- Leverage elementary schools, middle schools, high schools, and higher education institutions to provide programs that develop a future creative workforce to grow and sustain the creative sector.
- Develop a high school Creative Industry Academy, modeled on existing academies (e.g., Information Technology & Security Academy, Alamo Area Aerospace Academy, and Manufacturing Technology Academy), that pairs magnet schools with local creative businesses.
- Work with local school districts, PTAs, and education committees to enhance the arts education at the K-12 level.
- Support the securing of flagship status (i.e., Tier I Doctoral/Research Extensive Status) for the University of Texas at San Antonio.
- Support the expansion of the Culinary Arts program at St. Philips College.
- Facilitate the creation of new degree programs in creative fields and the expansion of existing degree programs at local colleges and universities.

Lead Agency: EDD and OCA, in partnership with local school districts, local Parent-Teacher Associations, University of Texas at San Antonio, St. Mary's University, Trinity University, University of the Incarnate Word, Our Lady of the Lake University, Alamo Community College District, San Antonio, Inc.

Begins: 2007/08

Resources: Staff resources plus program funding to be determined through strategic planning

17. Explore the creation or further development of cultural districts or zones in areas such as the Houston Street area, South Flores, South Town, Guadalupe Street, the Deco District, Nagolitos Street, Blanco Street, South Presa Street, and the Carver Cultural Center District.

Cultural districts with highly successful programming already exist to varying degrees in some areas, such as South Town and First Friday. OCA and the Planning Department, in consultation with representative San Antonio artists, should lead research and community planning efforts to explore specific potentials for creating new, or augmenting current, cultural districts. This planning should include the less-formal structure of a cultural zone. It should also identify next steps for such issues as designation, signage, structure, funding, programming and marketing.

Lead Agency: OCA, Planning Department, CVB, Downtown Alliance, Public Works, VIA, Neighborhood Action Department, Downtown Advisory Board, Chambers of Commerce, individual artists, representatives of creative businesses

Begins: 2008/09

Resources Needed: Staff resources for planning

18. Create a program of fellowships for individual artists of all disciplines in San Antonio.

Fellowships for individual artists will support for the creation of new work by San Antonio artists and serve to develop and promote the creative sector. OCA should administer the fellowship program and arrange for exhibition of work created by fellows. Fellowships should be awarded on a competitive basis by peer review, with a transparent and equitable selection process.

Lead Agency: OCA

Begins: 2007/08

Resources Needed: $50,000 annually for fellowships plus related program expense, such as exhibition, marketing and catalogue.

19. Develop support services for San Antonio's individual artists, including networking opportunities, information and referral services, a resource directory, professional development training, and leadership development.

A thriving creative community requires support services that inform and connect the artists and other creative individuals in the community. OCA should provide or arrange these services, partnering with other organizations to avoid duplication.

Lead Agency:	OCA, with potential partners such as the Nonprofit Resource Center and CASA's Arts Education Task Force
Begins:	2007/08
Resources Needed:	Staff resources plus related program expenses, including $25,000 annually for professional and leadership development

20. Create a cultural and heritage tourism program within CVB designed to promote San Antonio's cultural assets and identity, move visitors beyond current zones, and encourage visitation in neighborhoods.

This program should be developed following completion of the plan described in the following recommendation.

CVB should create a broadly-based committee to advise the cultural and heritage tourism program, including CVB, OCA, Economic Development Department, International Affairs Department, Film Commission, arts and cultural organizations and other relevant stakeholders.

CVB should also develop a matching grants program for arts and cultural organizations to fund marketing expenses related to the goals of the cultural and heritage tourism program.

Lead Agency:	CVB
Begins:	2005/06
Resources:	Staff resources, plus related program expenses for marketing, product development, etc.

21. Develop a cultural and heritage tourism plan to inform the goals, structure and operations of the new cultural and heritage tourism program.

CVB should undertake a formal planning effort for the cultural and heritage tourism program, based on this TCC plan and the existing research done by CVB. The tourism plan should address fundamental issues such as vision and authentic identity, as well as tactical issues.

Lead Agency: CVB
Begins: 2006/07
Resources: $75,000 plus staff resources

22. Create a CVB staff position dedicated to cultural and heritage tourism.

The cultural and heritage tourism program will require dedicated staff. This new position should coordinate efforts with OCA's marketing staff.

Lead Agency: CVB
Begins: 2006/07
Resources: $35,000

23. Coordinate the efforts to develop the creative economy.

The scope of economic development initiatives recommended in this plan is large and will require oversight to:

- Coordinate economic development efforts through The Cultural Collaborative and San Antonio, Inc.
- Establish performance measures to track and promote results of the aforementioned initiatives.
- Ensure reporting and accountability of the partner commitments to the economic development of the creative sector through reporting at The Cultural Collaborative and San Antonio, Inc. conferences.

Lead Agency: TCC, San Antonio, Inc., EDD and OCA
Begins: 2005/06
Resources: Staff resources

Community Awareness

Objective: To increase community awareness of the role and value of all San Antonio's arts and culture.

The Apparent Paradox of the Arts and Culture

The goal of increasing community awareness of the arts and culture was a consistent, clear message from the community throughout the TCC process. Participants commented in detail about the extraordinary accomplishments and value of San Antonio's arts and cultural community, and their frustration that this contribution is not better understood or supported by the public and by policy makers.

The explanation for this apparent contradiction lies in perception. For example, San Antonio is a thoroughly cultural and creative community but it does not always see itself as one. Despite the high level of residents' actual participation in the arts and culture, the TCC public opinion survey (page 77) suggests a perception problem with the term "arts and culture." Some San Antonians, especially those who are younger and less-educated, do not relate to this term. They attend arts and cultural activities but tend to view it as entertainment or leisure activity. They are part of the unrecognized but critically important "undercurrent" of cultural activity that is integrated into San Antonio's way of life, and that is a key focus of TCC. This may reflect the common misunderstanding that the arts are elite and not for the average person, or that the arts are merely a quality of life issue.

"What is unique about San Antonio? Three hundred thousand people come to the Fiesta parade on a Friday night, and then six hundred thousand come the next night for the enjoyment of what is San Antonio. The entire city is there, it's very diverse, and there isn't even a big police or security presence."

TCC Review Focus Group participant Marketing Consultant

In fact, San Antonians want more arts and culture and are willing to pay for it, according to the TCC public opinion survey. A majority of San Antonians would pay an additional $10 annually in taxes to support the arts and culture, 57% want more arts education in schools, and 54% said that it was very important that the public schools redirect more of their existing budgets into arts education.

San Antonio is far from unique in this circumstance. In the arts and culture, there is frequently a discrepancy between public attitudes and behavior, on the one hand, and public policy on the other. A series of national polls and studies in the 1990's documents a consistent pattern: more than half the American public attends the arts annually, defined narrowly as museums, musical plays, classical music concerts, opera, jazz, plays, or ballet. And Americans overwhelmingly support more arts education and increased government funding for the arts. Yet arts support has declined substantially and disproportionately in recent years, by such measures as total state spending on the arts and the portion of private charitable contributions going to the arts. This apparent paradox is now understood as a lack of community awareness and effective advocacy. Local and national organizations have long recognized the need to “make a better case” for the role and significance of the arts and culture in communities and the economy, and to broaden the public’s understanding of what is included in the realm of the arts and culture.

Advocate for the Arts and Culture

For this reason, the issue of community awareness has risen to the top of the national agenda in the past year. Americans for the Arts created in 2004 a national political advocacy organization, the Arts Action Fund, to engage citizens in education and advocacy in support of the arts and arts education. Their goal is to recruit 100,000 members in the first year, and to have 1 million members within five years. This “PAC” will help ensure that arts-friendly public policies are adopted at the federal, state, and local levels, and public and private resources are maximized.

“Advocacy and outreach are the essential issues – they impact all of the other issues. We simply are not making our good work known.”

Community Forum participant

TCC participants suggested a local version of this national effort. They repeatedly pointed out the lack of a coordinated effort to inform the general public about San Antonio’s arts and culture, and the inadequacy of current, scattered advocacy efforts. The arts and cultural community has not had a unified voice and message. Planning participants believe that once the actual role of the arts and culture is better understood by more San Antonians, participation will increase and policy will become more supportive. They also desire to have a “place at the policy table,” where the interests and resources of the arts and culture can be considered in decisions about community issues, such as education, economic development, and neighborhood and urban planning.

Build Greater Cultural Equity

The issue of cultural equity in the arts and culture is relevant to more than one TCC objective and is discussed in the Access chapter (page 29). The TCC Executive Committee discussed cultural equity in some detail and drafted an initial statement to serve as the basis for development into a cultural equity policy (page 12). Achieving greater cultural equity is an important part of community awareness for several reasons. First, the demographics and history of San Antonio make this an over-arching community issue that should be considered a part of most, if not all, public policy. Second, the arts and culture are an effective tool for promoting cultural understanding and respect; they should be an integral component of San Antonio’s efforts to ensure greater cultural

“We must understand the importance of consolidating and unifying our message about the value of the arts to our community.”

Community Forum participant

equity. Third, as discussed in the Access chapter, addressing cultural equity is also a necessary component of increasing attendance in the arts and culture, and overcoming barriers to participation.

Outreach to the Community

Achieving greater community awareness of the arts and culture in San Antonio will require more than television and billboard ads. Outreach programs that bring more arts and culture to more residents are a long-term strategy for changing attitudes and increasing understanding. Indeed, the nature of the arts and cultural experience is that it is meaningful and even transformative for participants. Having a positive arts and culture experience, and having early exposure, are the most important factors in a person's decision to participate. This means that programs designed to reach under-served and new participants, and the young, are the slow and steady means for converting non-attenders and building new audiences. As discussed in the Access chapter (page 29), increasing participation generally requires removing or diminishing barriers to attendance. This includes practical solutions such as better marketing as well as programs that are culturally relevant to the intended audience. This suggests that outreach programs must be designed in two-way communication with the target participants, a dialogue that often corrects misperceptions on both sides.

Community Awareness Strategies

24. Create a comprehensive, long-term advocacy initiative.

Successful advocacy will require sustained and focused effort, under the leadership of an independent organization with adequate resources, including staff. As recommended in Resources, a new organization, The Cultural Collaborative, created to oversee implementation of the plan, should take the lead on advocacy (page 68). It should create a strategic advocacy plan, including a unified agenda and message, and develop an advocacy toolkit for community use.

Lead Agency:	TCC, in partnership with local cultural organizations, such as CASA and the Westside Coalition
Begins:	2005/06
Resources Needed:	Staff resources

25. Develop a cultural equity policy statement to guide the efforts of TCC and OCA.

A cultural equity policy will help ensure that TCC implementation, City programs and City-supported cultural institutions reflect the community's cultural and ethnic diversity. The policy should be developed jointly by TCC and OCA, utilizing a process of community input, utilizing the draft cultural equity statement developed during the TCC process (page 12).

Lead Agency:	TCC & OCA
Begins:	2007/08
Resources Needed:	Staff resources

26. Provide technical assistance to arts and cultural organizations to develop plans for cultural equity and/or more effective outreach, and matching funds to implement such plans.

Cultural equity and outreach, while not the same issue, are related and each challenge often requires planning, like other areas of management and governance. OCA, in partnership with the Nonprofit Resource Center and the UTSA Department of Public Administration, should coordinate a technical assistance program in the form of information resources, workshops and individual consultations to enhance cultural competency and develop cultural equity and/or outreach plans, with matching grants available to help implement the plans. Local cultural organizations can help provide and identify diversity resources and experts.

Lead Agency: OCA, in partnership with Nonprofit Resource Center, UTSA Department of Public Administration, and local cultural organizations

Authenticity and Creativity

Objective: To strengthen San Antonio's unique and diverse culture, heritage and architecture.

Use Culture and Creativity to Define San Antonio's Identity

TCC planning participants passionately discussed the twin issues of San Antonio's authentic identity and its creativity. They view San Antonio as engaged in a long-term struggle to define its authentic identity and choose how it embraces creativity. In essence, participants place great value on aspects of San Antonio's way of life and view culture and creativity as essential ingredients. They also object to the erosion of San Antonio's authentic identity and consider culture and creativity to be critical to improving it.

Participants expressed frustration that "authenticity" has sometimes been appropriated to mean simple preservation of the past, the "dumbing down" of heritage, or even erasure of ethnic identity. They commented that the community is generally slow to embrace innovation or change. They deplored the lack of "cool places" to gather and socialize outside the few well-known downtown areas.

"San Antonio has a very strong preservation ethic, but we need a paradigm shift here. San Antonio is afraid to build on the past."

Architects Focus Group participant

At the same time, they expressed great pride and enjoyment in what they perceive as San Antonio's authentic identity. Their experience of authenticity is largely a cultural one. They appreciated San Antonio's human scale and organic way of life that unselfconsciously integrate cultural activities into everyday experience. They appreciated the majority Mexican/Mexican American culture, bilingual atmosphere, international relationships and extensive cultural diversity. They love the tangible presence of cultural heritage in community events and in the historic buildings. Many people spoke about their choice to live in, or return to, San Antonio, often for reasons that included the cultural environment.

For many, San Antonio's authenticity is intimately linked to its creativity. The community's history includes great achievement in the arts and culture, and in the quality of the built environment.

Planning participants also view creativity as essential to San Antonio's future. Fostering innovation and enterprise is the way to extend the community's heritage. It is also the way to address many of San Antonio's challenges, such as growing the economy, strengthening education and improving the urban landscape.

"In the 1920's, Paris thought San Antonio was competition in the arts."

Improve San Antonio's Urban Design

San Antonio has an extraordinary and well-preserved collection of historic buildings and places, such as El Mercado, La Villita and the King William Historic District. Some treasures have been lost, including La Gloria, but the community clearly values its heritage and has adopted strong preservation requirements, enforced primarily through the Historic and Design Review Commission. Yet planning participants often commented on the uneven quality of contemporary architecture and urban design. Some parts of the city are viewed as lacking a coherent plan and aesthetic standards, a situation made all the more objectionable in contrast to the intrinsic beauty and interest of the historic building stock. Design professionals, developers and citizens alike commented on their desire to see San Antonio do better in fashioning itself as a modern city. They also indicated that, while San Antonio had relatively strong urban planning and design guidelines in place, they are not rigorously enforced. The Historic and Design Review Commission (HDRC) has responsibility for conducting design review, but focuses almost exclusively on historic preservation and is described as “reactive” in nature. HDRC pays little attention to review of contemporary development and architecture.

“San Antonio lacks a coherent, compact arts center. It is a fragmented, distributed system, not connected to downtown.”

Architects' Focus Group participant

Residents stated their desire for more interesting and authentic public gathering places. They cited the lack of urban spaces that encourage interaction and dialogue, and the apparent lack of planning and vision in designing this function into many new commercial and residential developments. Several employers commented on this as a significant weakness in attracting and retaining creative employees.

To address many of these concerns, a thoughtful urban design master plan can offer important benefits to San Antonio. It can bring into focus important aesthetic assets of the community that can be strengthened and reinforced. In an era of increasing suburbanization, an urban design plan can promote smart growth that emphasizes transit-oriented density along major corridors. It can highlight the unique identities of particular neighborhoods. Ultimately, everyone in the community benefits as property values rise. Finally, it can ensure the careful integration of new buildings and infrastructure into the vibrant historic character of San Antonio.

Many participants also spoke about the limited image of San Antonio that tourists see, and their desire to project a more authentic representation. Rather than having an experience of cultural tourism, visitors are shown a shallow “touristic culture.” Participants would strongly prefer to improve visitors’ experience by directing them to

Use Public Art for Aesthetic Leadership

The City's Public Art and Design Enhancement Program is well-established and its collection adds value to the built environment.

The program has the potential to contribute more to the community's authentic identity, and to provide aesthetic leadership in developing the contemporary definition of what is authentically San Antonian.

Stakeholders of this program believe that it would benefit from development of a cohesive vision that would give the public art collection a better-focused and -articulated artistic identity, and would increase its value to the community.

"Private developers should be required to include public art whenever they ask for incentives or concessions from the City."

Authenticity and Creativity Strategies

27. Develop an urban design master plan.

San Antonio has a wealth of historically significant buildings and architecture and has generally done an excellent job in preserving this rich cultural resource. The City has been less successful in ensuring the quality of new public and private development and promoting the successful integration of contemporary architecture into the cityscape. The creation of an urban design master plan would provide a roadmap to guarantee that new development reaches the highest level of civic aesthetics.

The master plan should employ a community process to articulate a community vision and identity for San Antonio's built environment, including how to integrate its historic and contemporary aesthetics. It should also address the question of whether the Historic and Design Review Commission or a separate Urban Design Review Board should assume authority for implementation of design standards.

The master plan should include development of an inventory of cultural and aesthetic assets in San Antonio's downtown and selected neighborhoods to inform local urban design decisions.

Lead Agency:	Planning Department
Begins:	2007/08
Resources Needed:	$150,000

28. Develop a Public Art Master Plan for San Antonio.

The City has successfully completed a number of excellent public art projects in recent years and has demonstrated a commitment to including public art in City public works projects. These projects, however, are developed on a case-by-case basis and lack an overarching vision that would integrate the public art into the fabric of the City in a cohesive way. Development of a public art master plan would accomplish this. The planning process should address issues that include:

- Adoption of a requirement for public art in new private development.
- Maintenance and restoration of the collection.
- Ways to enhance program management and effectiveness, including potential transfer of responsibility for the Public Art and Design Enhancement Program from the Public Works Department to OCA.

Lead Agency: Public Art and Design Enhancement Program (Public Works Department), Economic Development Department, Planning Department,
AIA, OCA

Begins: 2006/07

Resources Needed: $75,000

29. Complete implementation of OCA's neighborhood tour packages.

The City has already developed plans for a series of neighborhood tours that highlight the heritage and cultural amenities of various communities throughout San Antonio. It is recommended that OCA, in conjunction with the CVB, take steps to implement these tours. They represent an important opportunity for the city to move visitors out of the downtown and into other parts of the city.

Lead Agency: OCA, in collaboration with CVB and the cultural and heritage tourism committee, VIA

Begins: 2007/08

Resources Needed: $30,000

Resources

Objective: To develop increased resources of all types.

San Antonio Needs and Supports Increased Resources

Resources are an essential ingredient in the implementation of any plan, and TCC will require a variety of resources for implementation of its objectives, over the next ten years. However, San Antonio's arts and cultural community is now, and has been historically, under-funded and under-resourced. Therefore, increasing resources of all types was identified by planning participants as an objective in its own right, to "raise the bar" of support and reshape the ecology of resources for the creative community.

According to the TCC public opinion survey, San Antonians are willing to pay higher taxes for the arts and culture. Two out of three respondents (66%) indicated strong support for an initiative to generate tax revenue for arts support if it meant they would spend an additional $5 per year in taxes; 58% strongly support an additional $10. Moreover, at the levels of $10 and $5 in additional taxes per year, respondents who strongly favor an initiative outnumber those strongly against it by 3 to 1.

Resources addressed in TCC include:

- Leadership
- Public and private funding
- Cultural facilities

Focus Leadership on Communitywide Issues

The primary leadership need arising from the TCC process was to coordinate leadership to address communitywide issues. Planning participants included many experienced and effective leaders from the arts and cultural community, and their allies from other sectors. The missing ingredient appears to be the structure and agenda to focus their efforts on broad community issues that impact the arts and culture. Indeed, many expressed the hope and belief that the TCC plan would provide that framework and consensus for collective action.

"San Antonio has no committee of 100 or other collaborative to look at citywide cultural issues."

Community Forum participant

As with community awareness, San Antonio's leadership issues mirror a national need. The Center for Arts and Culture 2004 report, Cultural Policy at the Grassroots, made recommendations for solutions to national issues that can be implemented in local communities.

The recommendations all involve collective action on the local level to garner new leadership resources for the task of addressing communitywide cultural issues. The first recommendation of that report is to create a coordinating, non-governmental organization dedicated to the local cultural community, one that can lead in the areas of advocacy, public policy and communications.

Address Cultural Facilities Needs

San Antonio has an extensive and attractive collection of cultural facilities and organizations. These range from historic renovations such as the Majestic Theater, to adaptive reuse such as the Southwest School of Art and Craft, the Carver Community Cultural Center and Blue Star Contemporary Art Center, to ambitious contemporary architecture like the Central Library, designed by Mexican architect Ricardo Legorreta. Participants detailed needs for additional facilities in under-served areas of the city and for specific uses, such as a performing arts theater suitable for symphony, opera and dance, and a potential museum at KellyUSA. In 1996, the City completed a communitywide study of performing arts facilities. While few recommendations were implemented and the circumstances have substantially changed since that time, the study does help validate the general need for a broader array of cultural facilities.

However, one of the first and least glamorous needs expressed during the TCC process was the problem of deferred maintenance in cultural facilities. Deferred maintenance refers to building upkeep, such as repainting walls or replacing air conditioning equipment, that is delayed because of budgetary constraints. This problem highlighted San Antonio's primary facility issue—caring for the needs of existing facilities. There is no composite study quantifying the dollar amount of deferred maintenance, or the total value of desired and planned capital projects to improve existing cultural facilities. OCA does have strong anecdotal evidence of deferred maintenance among most cultural facilities, and several major capital campaigns are well behind schedule or on hold. It is clear that the magnitude of need for current cultural facilities is great. It is equally clear that current funding does not address the problem in a comprehensive manner.

The City does not currently have a capital funding program to address the needs of organizations occupying City-owned cultural facilities. In fact, the City has a systemic problem of deferred maintenance and other capital needs for all of its real estate, not limited to cultural facilities, estimated in the billions of dollars. The lease agreements for City-owned cultural facilities transfer all responsibility for facility maintenance to the user. As a result, all arts and cultural organizations must finance their capital needs through private funding, which poses special difficulties, as described in the next section.

"Fragmented is the one word that describes fundraising in San Antonio."

Planning participant Fundraising

Increase Public and Private Funding

San Antonio's arts and cultural community is under-capitalized and has faced structural problems and trends that have prevented substantial change. In the realm of public dollars, San Antonio's per capita funding for the arts and culture is substantially less than the national average, and far below the cities of Dallas, Austin and Houston. Of the 50 largest U.S. cities, San Antonio ranks 26th, according to a 2003 study by Americans for the Arts. OCA's revenues derive almost entirely from a fixed percentage of the CVFF ("Hotel Occupancy Tax"). While these revenues have remained relatively constant over the past three years, the total amount is inadequate to the needs identified through TCC. Recent cuts have diminished OCA's total arts grants to approximately the same amount as ten years ago, despite substantial growth in the city's population and the number of cultural organizations serving them. With no diversification of public revenues, San Antonio's arts and cultural community is unduly dependent on the state of the tourism industry.

Private funding presents a similarly limited environment. The number of local foundations and corporations that contribute to the arts and culture has declined in recent years. Total giving is down. In addition, fundraising experts note that family foundations are less oriented towards the creative sector, in part because newer generations of family members have different community relationships and priorities. Also, some arts and cultural organizations lack sufficient fundraising expertise or capacity to conduct state-of-the-art development campaigns. And without a unified set of cultural priorities, each organization must make its funding case individually, without strong reference to communitywide consensus on a cultural need.

"In San Antonio, there has been very poor cultivation of 2nd and 3rd generation philanthropy."

Fundraising professional consultant

One bright note is the recent formation of the Bexar County Arts and Cultural Fund, a unified arts fund that seeks to generate new private dollars for arts and cultural organizations, modeled after similar programs in Cincinnati and other cities. This fund plans to begin fundraising in 2005, targeting workplace giving and other business contributions.

Resources Strategies

30. Develop a temporary new arts and culture organization, The Cultural Collaborative (TCC), to oversee implementation of the plan and take the lead on advocacy.

TCC should be developed from the membership of the TCC Steering Committee, with the addition of other community leaders. To avoid duplication of services and competition for resources, TCC should limit its mission to the duration of implementation of the plan, and not produce public programming.

To oversee implementation, TCC should conduct an annual conference, including broad representation from different sectors of the community, as well as the boards of directors of San Antonio's arts and cultural organizations, to monitor progress in the implementation of the plan and evaluate and adjust the strategies as needed. The conference should include resource tables highlighting San Antonio's cultural offerings.

To lead on advocacy, TCC should undertake a comprehensive, communitywide advocacy initiative, as recommended on page 56.

Lead Agency:	TCC Steering Committee
Begins:	Immediately
Resources Needed:	Eventually, to be effective, at least part-time staff will be required

31. Increase the share of the Convention and Visitors Facility Fund (CVFF or "Hotel Occupancy Tax") allocated to arts and culture through 1) an increase in the percentage of CVFF allocated to OCA, and 2) allocation of existing CVB funds to cultural tourism.

OCA currently receives 8% of CVFF revenues and state law permits dedicating as much as 15% to the arts and culture. OCA's 8% share was more than $3.3 million in 2003; increasing the portion to 15% would have added approximately $2.9 million more.

In addition, regardless of whether the percentage of revenues dedicated to OCA is changed, CVB should allocate funds from its own budget to fund the cultural and heritage tourism program recommended by TCC.

Lead Agency:	CVFF Departments
Begins:	2005/06, phased in over three years
Resources Needed:	Staff resources, $500,000 increase per year ($1.5 million total)

32. Develop a new, dedicated tax-based revenue stream for arts and culture through a joint tax initiative in collaboration with other community organizations.

Going to the voters to create a source of dedicated tax revenues has been a successful strategy in communities around the U.S., including Denver (a seven county area), Salt Lake County, and St. Louis. These revenue sources generate substantial amounts of annual funding and have transformed the environment for the arts and culture, providing a strong funding base that helps stabilize the community of nonprofit arts and cultural organizations. These initiatives are often based on coalitions of community interests, such as arts, natural science, parks and libraries. Packaging quality of life interests into one political initiative has been the most successful approach.

In San Antonio, both a sales and property tax initiative should be explored, in partnership with other community organizations, such as the San Antonio Public Library Foundation. TCC should provide the lead on advocacy in support of a voter initiative.

Lead Agency:	OCA in partnership with other organizations, such as the San Antonio Public Library Foundation. TCC lead on advocacy.
Begins:	2006/07
Resources Needed:	Staff resources; lobbying funds

33. Develop a capital grants program for arts and cultural organizations for deferred maintenance and capital projects of less than $100,000.

This recommendation addresses smaller capital needs and parallels the following recommendation for larger capital projects. Grants for smaller capital needs should be made on a competitive, bi-annual basis on the alternate years from OCA's arts funding cycle, with funds distributed annually. Eligibility should be open to any nonprofit San Antonio arts and cultural organization operating a cultural facility, whether owned by the City of San Antonio, owned by the nonprofit, or secured by a long-term lease.

OCA, in partnership with the Asset Management Department, should investigate potential funding sources, including the CVFF ("Hotel Occupancy Tax"), Community Development Block Grants, private funds available through the Bexar County Arts and Cultural Fund or other private resources, City of San Antonio General Obligation and/or Certificate of Obligation Bonds, private bonds guaranteed by the City, Brownfield grants, or General Fund. It is possible that funding sources for this grants program will vary from cycle to cycle.

Meeting the capital needs of San Antonio's arts and cultural organizations will benefit from increased communication and coordination among private and public funding agencies to maximize and leverage funding and benefits.

Lead Agency: OCA and Asset Management Department, in partnership with Public Works Department, Housing & Community Development, Finance Department, Economic Development Department, Management & Budget Department

Begins: 2007/2008

Resources Needed: Funding (see above); staff resources

34. Develop a capital grants program for arts and cultural organizations for capital projects in excess of $100,000, such as construction, renovation and endowment.

This recommendation addresses larger capital projects and parallels the previous recommendation for smaller capital needs. Grants should be made on a competitive basis in advance of a bond election, with matching funds provided by the grantee. Eligibility should be open to any nonprofit San Antonio arts and cultural organization operating a cultural facility, whether owned by the City of San Antonio, owned by the nonprofit, or secured by a long-term lease.

In the absence of, or in addition to bond funding, other funding sources should be considered, as listed in the previous recommendation. Also, increased communication and coordination about capital projects among private and public funding agencies will help to maximize and leverage funding and benefits.

Begins: 2007/2008

Resources Needed: Funding (see above); staff resources

35. Promote the increase of private funding for the arts and culture.

OCA should develop a quarterly forum for dialogue among public and private funders to identify and address arts and cultural issues of communitywide importance, and assist with advocacy on these issues.

Also, TCC should coordinate support and advocacy in favor of the Bexar County Arts and Cultural Fund.

Lead Agency: TCC, private funders, OCA
 Begins: Immediate
 Resources Needed: Staff resources

36. Increase funding allocated to OCA for new staff positions and related program expenses, including increased grant-making.

Implementation of TCC will require increased funding allocations from the General Fund or other sources to OCA to help assure that the agency can fulfill its role. This will include new staff positions and increased program expenses. This should include an increase in the total amount available for the Arts Funding Program and other grants recommended in the plan. In addition, the Cultural Arts Board should review and revise funding guidelines to address OCA funding process issues raised during TCC meetings.

Lead Agency: OCA
 Begins: 2005/06
 Resources Needed: $70,000 for two new staff positions, plus related program costs, all specified in other strategies

37. Explore the development of a performing arts center in such buildings as the Municipal Auditorium, Joe & Harry Freeman Coliseum, or the Federal Office Building in HemisFair Park.

The 1996 performing arts facility study and TCC participants identified the need for a proscenium theater with the technical capacity to accommodate symphonic and opera concerts, theater productions and dance. OCA should facilitate exploration of the potential for reusing the Municipal Auditorium, Joe & Harry Freeman Coliseum, Federal Office Building in HemisFair Park, or other venue. It is anticipated that this facility would be the shared home of a consortium of organizations. Because of the large cost, this should be a long-term goal, one that will require a facility feasibility study to specify the requirements of the facility, location, potential users, management structure, funding and other issues.

Lead Agency: OCA and TCC, Bexar County
 Begins: 2006/07
 Resources Needed: Staff resources and $100,000 for a feasibility study

38. Explore the development of enhanced cultural uses of HemisFair Park, including a small (approximately 100-seat) outdoor amphitheater.

The HemisFair Park Master Plan identifies the opportunity to develop a small amphitheater behind the convention center that can be utilized by both the convention visitors and the general public. In addition, tenant organizations in the Park include a number of cultural institutions and have expressed the desire to augment the cultural identity of the Park. Enhanced cultural uses, including facility and program development, may also serve the goals of the new cultural and heritage tourism program, since CVB seeks ways to move visitors beyond current tourist zones and the Park is adjacent to those areas.

Lead Agency: CVB, Parks and Recreation Department, OCA,
Asset Management Department

Begins: 2006/07

Resources Needed: Staff resources for planning

IMPLEMENTATION TIMELINE, PRIORITIES AND BUDGET

Any cultural plan needs to be implemented over time. The inevitable limitations of staff resources and new funding streams demand this. TCC is a ten-year plan and it is likely that fulfilling some objectives will require the entire time period. The following chart represents the consultant team's best estimation of the timeline and priority for beginning work, during the first four years, on each of the recommended strategies in the plan. With respect to the budget and resources needed, it should be noted that some of the resources are one-time costs, which are indicated on the chart. Other costs are ongoing in the form of annual appropriations.

APPENDICES

Detailed Vision Statements

In addition to the overall vision for TCC, the Executive Committee developed detailed vision statements for ten focus areas in the planning process. These ten focus areas were reorganized into the five objectives of the completed plan.

Advocacy and Outreach: A culturally literate citizenry and community leaders that recognize the importance of arts and culture in civic life, the economy and education, and that actively support arts and culture through community participation, financial contributions, volunteerism, and political advocacy.

Civic Aesthetics/Public Art: A strong and well-supported program of public art, design and architectural preservation that, over time, will integrate arts and culture throughout the city's built environment, preserve San Antonio's historical resources and enhance its contemporary architecture and urban design.

Creative Individuals: A strong system of support for professional and amateur artists of all ages, creative individuals, and local creative businesses that have the facilities and resources to produce their work, who are recognized for their talents locally, regionally and nationally, and who contribute to San Antonio's economy.

Cultural Equity: Cultural equity is fundamental to San Antonio's arts and cultural environment. This includes the equitable distribution of resources among arts providers and the diverse communities they serve, as well as opportunities for relevant participation by all citizens.

Economic Development: A well-understood and well-planned creative economy that is recognized by residents and visitors for its unique and authentic cultural identity, that partners successfully with other economic sectors, and that strengthens San Antonio's overall economy through the creation of sustainable jobs.

Education: A fully developed, coordinated and well-supported system of arts and cultural learning opportunities in which schools actively partner with San Antonio's cultural institutions to integrate arts and culture into the curricula, and in which citizens of all backgrounds, ages and interests have access to lifelong learning in arts and culture.

Infrastructure/Ecosystem: High quality, well-equipped and well-maintained facilities and support services that allow the city's artists and cultural institutions to achieve their missions, and that help attract creative people and businesses to San Antonio.

Resources: A diverse system of public and private resources, partnerships and collaborations to support the artistic and cultural growth of the city, backed by the leadership to create and sustain the system.

Cultural & Heritage Tourism: Local, regional and national recognition of San Antonio as an important cultural and heritage destination, and of the vital role San Antonio's arts and cultural community plays as an economic generator for the city, enhancing local culture and tradition, attracting visitors, and bringing together residents and visitors.

Vital Neighborhoods: Strong neighborhoods that possess the resources and facilities to permit arts and culture to reinforce community interaction, tradition and pride through a diverse program of performances, exhibitions, festivals and other activities.

Public Opinion Survey

Overview

In October and November 2004, Galloway Research Service conducted a random household telephone survey in English and Spanish of 500 people in Bexar County. The purpose of the survey was to assess San Antonio's participation in arts and cultural activities and measure public opinions about arts education and government funding of the arts and culture. The methodology assured a representative sample of respondents, one that reflects the entire population in demographic terms, and a 4% margin of error.

Summary Conclusions

- Nine out of ten people in San Antonio have participated in a cultural event or activity in the past year. Most have participated in multiple activities.
- The range of cultural activities and events in which San Antonians engage is very broad, from attendance at neighborhood and city-wide festivals to listening to live music in dancehalls and attending theatrical and live dance performances.
- Frequent participation in many types of art-related or cultural events is stronger among the better educated and more affluent and is weakest among those with a high school education or less and incomes under $35,000 per year.

- While participation at specific events may be higher among certain ages (i.e. young people at rock music concerts) or among certain ethnic groups (i.e. Hispanics at Spanish language plays) the great variety of specific events within most activity categories means that participation in most categories does not vary greatly by ethnicity or age as much as by education or income.
- Of all identified groups, voters are far more likely than non-voters to participate in cultural or art-related activities.
- More than half of all Bexar County households with children have a child who is active in an art-related activity outside school.
- More than half of all Bexar County adults think that it is very important that:
 - Public schools increase the amount of art and music education they provide
 - Public schools direct more of their budgets into art and music education without raising taxes
- More than four in ten adults also state that it would be very important to raise school taxes to provide for additional art education.
- Even though opinions are mixed on whether San Antonio lags behind other cities in its support of the arts, a majority of people in Bexar County strongly agree that the City government should spend more in supporting cultural events and that more of the City budget should go toward enhancing the development of art and culture in San Antonio.

- One half or more of all people in Bexar County would support a tax initiative in support of the arts at levels of $15 per year or less in additional taxes. More than two-thirds strongly support such an initiative at the $5 per year level.
- Support for any art-supported tax initiative is far more likely to receive public approval if it comes through hotel occupancy taxes than through sales or property taxes.

- In San Antonio, the phrase “art and culture” may sound foreign or even intimidating to some poorer and less-educated people. In practice, many San Antonians think of their participation in many types of cultural events as “leisure activities” or “entertainment.” The most popular categories of events include:
 - Attendance at church or neighborhood festivals
 - Listening to live music in night clubs, bars and dancehalls

The complete public survey report is available upon request from OCA.

The Planning Process

The goal of the TCC planning process was to assist the community of San Antonio in developing its own cultural plan—like holding a mirror up to the community. The process was designed to elicit a range of ideas about needs and possible solutions from the broadest possible spectrum of stakeholders.

The planning process lasted 15 months, from the initial Finding Ways Conference in November 2003 to completion of the plan in January 2005. An 85-member Steering Committee of community leaders from inside and outside the creative community oversaw the planning process. An Executive Committee participated in five additional working sessions. More than 1,000 individuals and numerous organizations participated directly, providing their insight and suggestions through the conference, interviews, focus groups and six community forums held in neighborhoods throughout the city. Wider input was gathered from a random telephone household opinion survey, an economic impact study and a study of San Antonio's creative businesses. To gain additional perspectives, the planning team conducted an extensive review of relevant San Antonio plans and studies. They also compared San Antonio to other cities and examined models from other communities.

The planning process identified ten issues for consideration:

Advocacy and outreach	Creative individuals	Resources
Arts and cultural infrastructure	Cultural and heritage tourism	Vital neighborhoods
Arts and culture in education	Cultural equity
Civic aesthetics and public art	Economic development

Investigation of these issues resulted in the development of the five objectives of the plan:

Access	Authenticity and creativity
Economic development	Resources
Community awareness

As discussed in the Cultural Equity section (page Error! Bookmark not defined.), this issue was viewed by participants as a fundamental value that applies throughout the subject areas of the plan.

The following is a list of meetings held as part of the TCC planning process. A list of participants and additional detail on the planning process is in Planning Participants, page 85.

Just as it takes a village to raise a child, it has taken the patient and caring efforts of an extended group to create The Cultural Collaborative. Community planning on the large scale of TCC was only possible with the visionary leadership and diligent work of Felix Padrón, Director of the City of San Antonio's Office of Cultural Affairs, and his staff, especially Arts Program Coordinator Ava Lambert and Project Management Specialist Laura Braden.

Mayor Ed Garza and Judge Nelson Wolff, co-chairs of the Steering Committee provided their singular leadership and counsel to the process. The efforts of all Steering Committee members are greatly appreciated, all the more so because many were new to the creative community. They have established a new collaborative spirit and practice that will ensure the success of the plan.

Special thanks must be given to the members of the Executive Committee, who gave their time and expertise to discuss ideas, review and develop materials, and guide the efforts of the planning team.

All City Council members gave generously of their time and advice at both the beginning and end of the planning process. This unanimity of interest and commitment is unusual and reflects the new political compact of reform and integrity of the current Council.

The work of Economic Development Department Director Ramiro A. Cavazos and Senior Economist Steven R. Nivin, Ph.D. was essential to making TCC truly comprehensive in its approach to development of the creative economy. They displayed their own vision and creativity in learning and adapting this new field, and taking the lead role in several areas of the planning process.

And finally, thank you to all the 1,000-plus community members who demonstrated their interest in and commitment to the cultural future of San Antonio by participating in the TCC planning process.
